SUMMERTIME PROVIDES SOME FUN IN THE SUN

As the 2:35 bell rang loud and clear, many different thoughts raced through everyone's minds. Visions of lazy summer days at the poolside, extra summer bucks, vacations to exotic places, or just plain "no more school." While the books and locks were turned in, yearbooks were passed around to be signed. A quick, "It was fun, see ya, next year," or "Call me and we'll do something over the summer" was scribbled in the last moments of school. Finally, after a long nine months summer had arrived. The first thing on everyone's mind seemed to be the privilege of sleeping late. Soon this became routine and another facet of summer came into focus, the dreaded summer job. Some students already had jobs, but others were sent out on the hunt. Many guys mowed lawns or worked at sporting goods stores. Some even lifeguarded while the girls worked at movie theaters, clothing stores or at the pool. For others, the quick pace as a fast food employee was their destination.

Central students in particular seemed to make good use of their free time. The main project of the summer for most girls was to begin on their tan. Venturing to local pools or even in their backyards, Central girls bathed in the summer sun. Some people got together for a fun day either at Smithville Lake or Oceans of Fun. This summer seemed to have an abundance of activities and special events. The most popular event that started the summer off with a bang was the Van Halen concert. The minute tickets went on sale, people pushed and shoved and dialed their way through, fighting for tickets. The demand was so great that a second day was announced. Other concerts rocked-n-rolled people all through the long and hot summer, with a grand finale by The Cars in August.

After cramming in the last bit of summer fun, students returned to school only to hear the age old question, "What did you do this summer?" and as always the exciting reply, "Ah, nothing."

HUNGRY AUDIENCES CRAVE THE MOVIE SCENE

Screen writers and actors prepared outrageous works of art for their movie-hungry audiences this year. These proud creators served their tantalizing dishes in hope of winning our approval and praise. All these delicacies were enjoyed by Centralites who had ten tempting choices every week.

The summer bounced off to a great start with those crazy devils who shouldn't eat after midnight — Gremlins. A kick from the Karate Kid didn't slow the season down a bit. Shortly after, Ralph Macchio played another lead role in Teachers which kept the audiences roaring. Continuing the tradition of comedy was Eddie Murphy in Beverly Hills Cop. This incredible movie was considered the peak of the laughter films with its unending radical scenes. On the more serious side, movie history had its ups and downs. Purple Rain, with its R rating, still remains unseen by many students' eyes. In this exquisite film, rock star Prince portrayed a singer in a shaky household. Other features that gave their audiences an All-American feeling were Places in the Heart, Country, and The River. St. Joseph was introduced to the world of the future with the arrival of Dune and 2010. For those with a heart for terror, 1985 was theirs. Nightmare on Elm Street engulfed its viewers in fear while the Terminator eliminated all hope of a restfull night's sleep. The entertainment possibilities were endless as people poured in to watch Vision Quest, The Breakfast Club, Mischief, Witness, The Killing Fields, Turk 182, The Falcon and the Snowman, The Flamingo Kid, Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom, City Heat, The Wild Life, Protocol, Revenge of the Nerds, Micki and Maude, and the absolutely unforgettable Ghostbusters.

No matter what your pleasure, it could easily be found on this year's movie menu, and with the help of the popular new VCR's, these exciting features will be around for years to come.

ALMOST ANYTHING GOES

Roaming the halls of CHS was quite an experience for truly observant individuals. It was impossible not to notice the outlandish outfits exhibited by the fashionable students. No longer were classic polos and izods the "in" look. Outfits were put together on last minute whims with an "almost anything goes" theme. It all depended on how unique and daring the students were. Other individuals were not eager to make a personal statement and chose to quietly follow the trend setters.

Guys' fashions didn't change very much this year because Levi's and an ordinary shirt will never go out of style. "Levi Strauss was a genius," stated John Droghei with a wide grin. On the other hand, females at Central had an exciting year because they witnessed and participated in one of the most dramatic fashion sweeps ever. Oversized shirts were favored by almost the entire student body. They could be seen everywhere, and when supplemented with a bulky belt a complete 1985 ensemble was created. Bright colors seemed to highlight the classrooms, although too many in one place seemed disturbing. Many brave girls pranced through the halls in neon, florescent pieces only to blind those around them. Georgette Reed remarked, "Neons are neat, but too many on one person gives me a headache!" Forenza sweaters arrived late in the season, and during the winter months they dominated over the light-weight cottons. Some girls dramatized the look by adding dazzling accessories which made their designs complete. These extras included bracelets, dangling earrings, net hose, belts, moosed hair, and maybe even a pair of mirrored glasses. The different styles of jeans ranged from cropped with weird patterns and textures to almost too long and very baggy. Two-tone colored jeans were a major hit at Central.

Although some students disapproved of the designs the majority of the students felt that fashion would continue to Reach New Heights. Kris Green commented, "I think casual fashion is a necessity in 1985!"

ONCE UPON A MUSICAL TIME

A very studly man named Bruce drove up to the Valotte, a small bar on the borderline. He parked his pink Cadillac and began to strut to the door. He was wearing his sunglasses at night because he thought they made him look very chic. Opening the door, Bruce noticed the boys of Summer and the California girls stood solid as a rock. He knew no one recognized him because he was a stranger in town. Not wanting to cause any alarm, Bruce bellowed a quick, "Relax!" Suddenly, catching his ear, Bruce heard a careless whisper saying, "Hello again." He remembered that voice. It was the Caribbean Queen, the only woman who wasn't just another night. She was with one of the wild boys and Bruce could not believe they were carrying on the method of modern love. He sensed the Caribbean Queen walking over to him, and he knew the heat was on. He whispered to himself, "I can't fight this feeling." The Caribbean Queen asked if he was looking for somebody. Bruce didn't answer. She wanted to keep the conversation rolling so she asked him how the glamorous life was going. Bruce knew that she wanted him to stay the night. The Caribbean Queen demanded, "Why can't I have you?" Bruce told her coldly, "You ain't enough, and I ain't missing you at all." The Caribbean Queen began to cry tears of purple rain. Ignoring her, Bruce moved closer to the bar and sat down. She shouted to him, "Take me with you!" Bruce, not about to be misled told her, "Eat my shorts!" The bartender told them to cool it, now. Bruce walked out of the bar remembering the cruel summer the Caribbean Queen had given him and decided to return to his new penny lover and their jungle love.

GERRY FERRARO MAKES HISTORY

Geraldine Ferraro carved a new path for the women of the future in 1984. She once said that women candidates do not receive enough support and encouragement from their own party. Ferraro proved this to be false as she captured the support of millions of people across the country. Her campaign stressed her desire to help the working class prosper.

When Walter Mondale chose Gerry Ferraro as his vice-president, he provided a role model for the women of America. This role model proved herself to be worthy of this important nomination and worked long and hard to win the support of registered voters. Although Mondale and Ferraro were unsuccessful in winning the election, they made history across the nation. They stayed in the race until the very last minute and never stopped fighting. Ferraro did not win the election, but she won an important battle against female discrimination.

1. Godfather's provides a friendly atmosphere for teen gatherings. 2. Campaign memorabilia fills the walls. 3. Fireworks blaze during the closing ceremonies of the Olympics. 4. Triumphant Mary Lou Retton wins the gold medal. 5. Geraldine Ferraro responds at the debates in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. 6. Showbiz Pizza Place provides entertainment for the whole family. 7. The new Sheraton Inn helps employment in St. Joseph.

ATHLETES EXECUTE DREAMS

Excitement was an understatement for the 1984 summer Olympics held in Los Angeles, California. Mary Lou Retton's perfect score of 10 and the award of the women's all-around in gymnastics was proof in itself that the events of the season were stimulating. Millions of Americans will never forget the heart warming feeling they experienced as they watched the glamorous opening ceremonies from their living rooms. Eighty-four grand pianos keyed the beginning of the parade of nations, and it was at this climactic moment that Romania and China received standing ovations from the encouraging crowd. The lighting of the Olympic flame by Rafer Johnson, after it had made the historic and glorious trip across the United States, ignited an American onslaught unprecedented in its participation in the games.

Carl Lewis equaled the legendary Jesse Owens with four gold medals in the same four events that Owens medaled in. Firsts in events that the U.S. had never been victorious seemed to roll in as the volleyball teams, both men and women, won medals. Jeff Blatnick, who two years ago was diagnosed as having cancer, won in Greco-Roman wrestling which was one of America's most surprising gold medals. The men's gymnastics team met the challenge of former world champions from China and won the team gold. American Joan Benoit ran her way to the gold in the first women's marathon. Greg Louganis dived into Olympic history with golds in both the platform and the spring board competitions.

Each Olympic Game has had its share of controversy as great tension arose in the 1984 summer games. Russia and its block of nations boycotted the L.A. games due to misconceptions concerning adequate protection of their athletes. Controversy also arose in the Mary Decker and Zola Budd race as they became entangled with Decker ending up on the edge of the track, and her hopes of the 3000 meter gold washed away. However, looking back at the '84 summer Olympics will always bring warm feelings to the hearts of Americans and tears to their eyes.

STRIVING FOR IMPROVEMENT

Changes enable people to Reach New Heights and even St. Joseph experienced some changes this year. These changes meant more jobs for Centralites and more exciting places to go. What were these fabulous new improvements? Three new restaurants were constructed in St. Joseph. Arby's, Showbiz Pizza Place, and another Godfather's brought their tantalizing delights to the city. As students began school, the three restaurants waited for the best time to jump on the tastebuds of every Central student. One week it was Showbiz, then another week it was Godfather's. Finally, Arby's completed the threesome in early October. Not only did St. Joseph receive new restaurants, but the Sheraton Inn was constructed in order to draw more people to the city. This glamorous hotel offered special guests and tourists a place to stay while away from home. All of these openings provided more activities for Central students and the residents of St. Joseph. Striving for improvement was an important goal this year to all individuals willing to take a chance.

REAGAN GAINS REELECTION

When the 1984 presidential election began, many Americans were undecided about which political party to support. There were two extremely promising candidates battling it out to the very end. In order to help the public make up their minds, the candidates participated in two televised debates. Thousands of people sat at home, glued to their television sets wondering who was the better choice. Ronald Reagan and Walter Mondale were both qualified for the job, but Americans had to choose the best. The debates mainly focused on nuclear arms and the enormous deficit the nation is facing. In discussing the defense of America, Mondale agreed that we need a stronger defense but not at the risk of eliminating social and community programs. He also felt that the government would have to raise taxes. Reagan expressed his feelings on the subject by saying that more money should be allowed for defense, and that the deficit would take care of itself.

On election day the polls opened, and people all over the United States voted for their candidate. Reagan gained the vote of 52,609,797 Americans and was reelected in a landslide victory.

STUDENTS SHOCKED WITH DRASTIC CHANGES

Changing, everything is changing. Some people say we are revolving with the times, and others say we must change to grow. If we alter things too much, we may lose touch of all to which we have grown accustomed. Our nation, for example, has gone through many modifications in the past century and has advanced beyond any expectations. Central High School has not been left behind either. It has revolved right along with everything else, yet some feel the school changed too suddenly. The incoming freshmen may not have realized the changes which had taken place, but the remainder of the student body were bewildered.

"Classroom interruptions" were words which became well known among the students as the administration worked on eliminating them. "Classroom interruptions were unwanted intrusions created by ringing bells, blue passes, and items of this nature," indictated Mr. Jim Wallerstedt, head of the classroom interruptions committee. To help reduce the numerous intrusions, small boxes were mounted in every classroom for all passes and any other messages.

Along with no classroom interruptions came the changes in the bell system. Five minutes were added to second hour to allow for the reading of the morning announcements. Thus, all day the bells were off five mintues which confused those students accustomed to the original system. During fourth hour lunch, numerous bells were eliminated which forced the students to watch the clock very closely while eating. Not only were the warning bells during lunch taken out, but so was the morning 7:45 bell. This took some getting used to because most students relied on this bell to warn them that it was time to head to their lockers.

Disputes and rage surfaced when the traditional queen assemblies were cancelled. An overwhelming amount of students were furious with this decision. They were accustomed to honoring their queens at a beautiful and traditional ceremony in Central's auditorium, not on the track or in the gym. Some students were not happy that their feelings were ignored, and they felt that a survey would have been appropriate.

Other changes in Central's routine were met with disapproval, as well. The dreaded news came that everyone would be required to take finals. Those students whose grades constantly lay on the borderline, now had something to fear. The prediction that absentees would increase became a reality also. Another change that really upset the senior class was the length of their school year. For as long as these seniors could remember, the graduating class had been dismissed from school about a week early. From now on graduation will take place after the school year is over, with the commencement held on June 2 this year. The senior class expressed their feelings explicitly when they displayed a banner at the moneymaker games which read, "Don't look forward to your senior year! We did!'

Students managed to survive the many changes this year whether they approved of them or not. As Central continues to change, everyone's ideas and feelings should be considered in order to Reach New Heights.

LIFE WITH SUSIE STUDENT

Brriinggg!!! Susie Student's alarm rang loud and clear interrupting her land of sleep. Trying to focus on the clock she realized it was time for another exciting day of school. Dragging herself out of bed, Suzie slowly made her way through the swamp of clothes and other items on her floor. She promised herself that before the day was over she would clean her room. Before long Susie was speeding off to school. She arrived at Central two minutes before 8:00 and made a mad dash to her first hour class. From room to room, she traveled until lunch time came. Susie grabbed a red Hi-C drink and flopped down in the closest chair. After exchanging gossip with her friends, she was off again to her last two classes. When the 2:35 bell rang, Susie zoomed out of the building and made a quick stop at McDonald's on her way home. After gobbling up a Big Mac, Susie hit the books and struggled through her assignments. At 10:30 p.m. she collapsed on her bed and realized she had failed. With a miserable sigh she mumbled to herself, "Tomorrow, I have to clean my room!"

POLICE STRIVE TO CURB CRUISING PROBLEM

"Hey, Bob, what are you doing tonight?"

"Gee, Jeff, I dunno! I'll probably go see a movie, then maybe hit the streets for a little cruising." Being in a typical middle-sized town, the teenagers of St. Joseph found that cruising was the "in" thing to do as it was anywhere else. Slowly a problem arose. Our private eye was one of the first on the scene. He discovered that the local merchants at the cruising "hot spots" began complaining about the litter in their parking lots. They felt the cruisers were driving away customers. The St. Joseph Police Force decided to take action at once.

Disguised as a typical teenager, our private eye rented a "cruise mobile" and took to the streets for an in-depth look at the situation. He found cruising was a very easy way to meet interesting people. He also noticed that the presence of the police force didn't deter any of the local cruisers. They decided that a more impressive action had to take place if this problem was to be solved. The police tagged individuals who seemed to make unnecessary amounts of trips around the parking lots and asked them to leave. Many of the young citizens left when asked, only to return at a later time. Sensing that more control was in need, the police began taking pictures of those who refused to leave the premises and warned them that they were going to call their guardian if they still remained after the warning. This reasoning caused an uproar between parents, the police, and the teenagers, often causing several articles in the newspaper. Even with all the controversy, the problem of cruisers remained. The police had no other choice but to issue tickets to those loitering on private property, if they still refused to leave after many warnings.

This eased the problem considerably, but the conflict of where the teenagers could turn for entertainment still stood tall. The local YMCA got together a council for local peers from the four high schools and organized a dance to be held every month. Now there is some place to go after the movies that is in the state and legal. Our trusty private eye decided to become a permanant teenager, so you might look for him at the dances.

PRINCE - IN THE FLESH

"We are pleased to announce that Prince is coming to Kemper Arena! Stay tuned to find out how you can win two front row, center stage tickets! We are your concert station!" Ears pricked and Susie scurried to the telephone. "Did you hear?" she inquired, "CONCERTS!!!" Within minutes everyone seemed to know. Immediately, one would picture himself on the front row staring into David Lee Roth's eyes, or backstage face to face with "the Boss" himself, Mr. Bruce Springsteen. When one returned to reality, he thought of the preparation and anticipation, which was half the fun. Susie got out her highest heels, and Joe tried on his leather pants, while explaining to their parents what a great guy Rick Springfield was. When the day finally arrived, everyone was overly anxious. Thoughts of school and especially homework were left behind, and thoughts of The Cars entered, as Jill and her friends piled into the car. Few concerts were held in St. Joseph, so in most cases it was necessary to travel to Kansas City. The trip, time, and money were all worth it as the lights went out. Screams engulfed the air and smoke appeared. Everyone's adrenaline began to flow as Prince appeared on stage - in the flesh. Viewing these talented artists provided students with some unforgettable memories.

1. Prince fans were disappointed when his sensational and action packed Purple Rain concert was cancelled. 2. Susie Student lets it all pile up.

WAKITAN REACHES NEW HEIGHTS

Creating a yearbook to please 1600 individuals was not an easy task especially for 20 people. Though each staff member had their own opinions and ideas about what the WAKITAN should look like, we had to pull together and work as a team. During the last few days of May 1984, the theme "Reaching New Heights" was suggested. After months of consideration and brainstorming, we decided the possibilities would be endless. During the summer our senior staff ventured to Marceline, Missouri, and paid a visit to Walsworth Publishing Company. This was an inspirational trip for us because it was here that we witnessed a scene our eyes had never seen before. All around us lay yearbooks in every color imaginable. To the left we saw pale shades of lilac and to the right there were flashes of hot pink. With these memories etched in our minds, we returned home and began work on our goal to break tradition. Central High School would not have a blue WAKITAN in 1985. The student body had grown accustomed to their traditional yearbook, and we knew we were taking a risk, but in order to Reach New Heights one must take risks. Therefore out of ten daring individuals the black cover was born. To spice up the dark background we added blocks of five racy colors; yellow, orange, red, green, and blue. However, our staff did not stop there because we wanted to create a yearbook that would be remembered for years to come. Five dazzling full color pictures were printed on the cover to help increase the overall effect.

Though the decisions concerning the theme and cover were highly important and required lots of time and effort, they were only the beginning. On every school day, WAKITAN members spent fourth hour dutifully slaving over various layout designs, numerous pieces of copy, hundreds of photographs and six major deadlines. Every staff has their problems, and this year's staff was no exception. When we ran into hectic times, we could always depend on our advisor to guide us in the right direction. Without Mrs. Lynette Barr's confidence in our abilities, we could have never achieved our goals. We thank her for believing in us and never losing faith. We would especially like to thank Mr. Jim Reed, our representative from Walsworth Publishing Company. He was a great inspiration to all of us with his constant encouragement. We would also like to say a special thank you to Bray Studio for their hard work and quick developing.

Nineteen eighty-five was a special year for our staff. We challenged ourselves to create a yearbook that would stand out above all others. We feel we have acheived our goal, and we hope the students of Central High School are pleased. Throughout our lives, we will all face many challenges. Only those who are determined and courageous will prevail. In order to dream one must have desires. In order to succeed one must Reach New Heights.

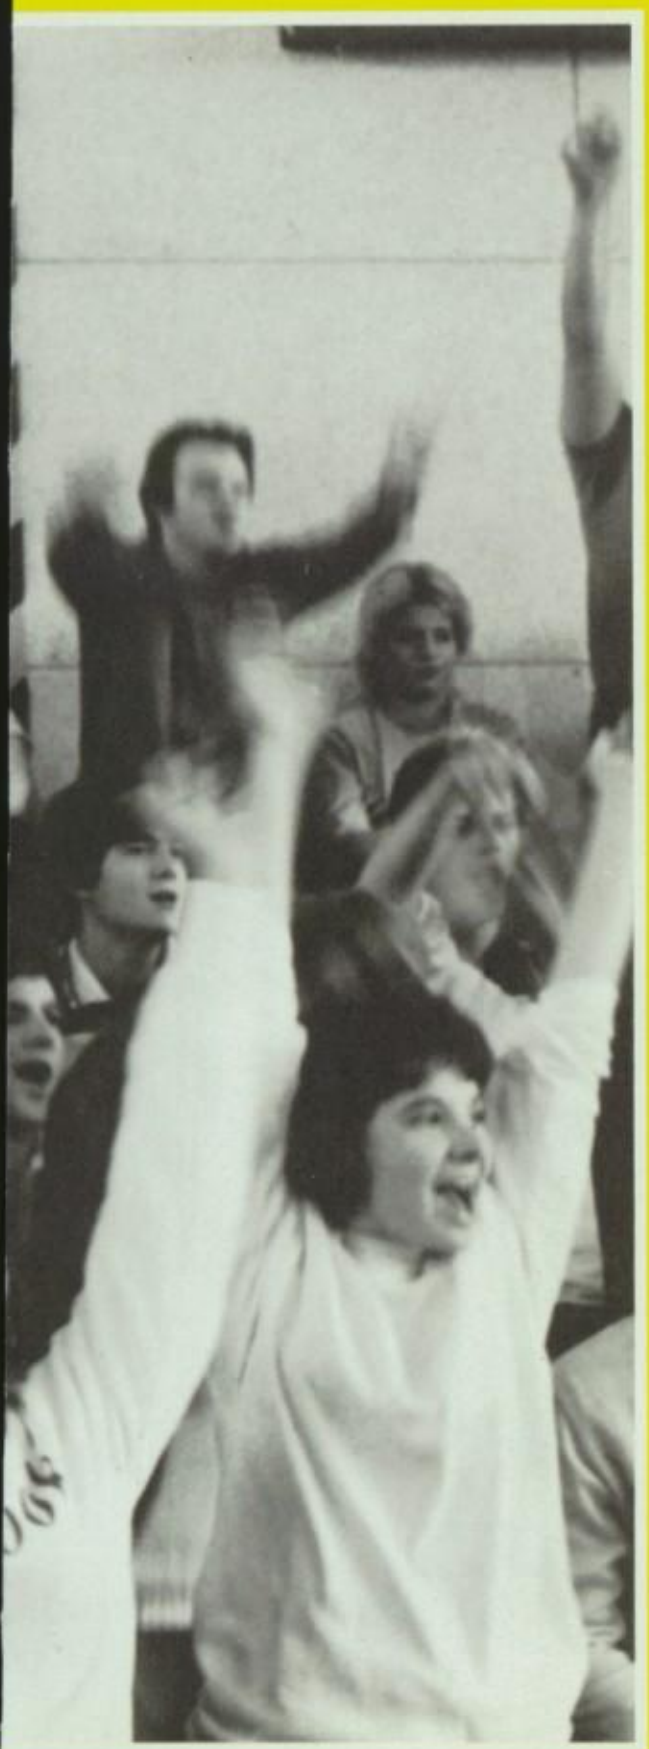
ENTERTAINMENTS!



Entertainment! It may be the only thing that keeps us from falling into the same old hum-drum routine day after day. From the first day of registration to the ending ceremonies of school, entertainment has been provided for us in many different ways. Can you imagine what school would be like without a homecoming week, pep assembly, or moneymaker game?

Since the beginning of summer the administration, student body officers, and cabinet members worked hard to prepare attractions for the students. The formula for success seemed to be enthusiasm plus involvement. As the year progressed, moneymaker came and went with unforgettable memories. Homecoming weeks brought out the nerd in us or our Roman backgrounds along with many other decorative clothing. Several holidays were celebrated as ghosts and goblins appeared in hallways, while students voted on the best turkey legs. Santa made his annual stop along with Cupid's arrows hitting many lovebird's hearts.

The year would not have been complete without the ever popular pep assemblies. The pom-pom girls danced; the cheerleaders cheered and humorous skits were performed. This year Central was given a chance to break loose, have fun, and just plain go crazy while Reaching New Heights in what was rated as the top Entertainment of the year!

LET'S GO CRAZY!

"Combine a new format, decorative clothes, a thrilling football game, and a victory dance, and you're bound for success," exclaimed Rosie Schultz.

When students enrolled at Central this year they never imagined all the new changes that were in store for them. One of the biggest surprises was the most exciting, original homecoming week that had ever been created for them. Although, not every idea used was original, the majority of the activities planned was fresh and vibrant.

Once again students dressed up in creative attire for the designated dress up day, plaid day, toga day, nerd day and Indian color day. One of the most successful days of the week was nerd day, (a first time attraction for Central). The question "Who will be our queen?" was answered on Thursday night at a pep rally. Tammy Follet was proclaimed queen, and she then set fire to the Benton Cardinals red egg. As the roaring flames encircled the effigy, the band played and the student body cheered.

The football players helped make homecoming week a smashing success with their 40-7 win over Benton. The week was drawn to an exciting close on Saturday night with a fabulous finale. Central students celebrated all night, dancing away to the live music of "The Allize." The theme of this year's dance was "Let's Go Crazy" and the student body carried the idea to the limit. The week of October 14-20 was a week to remember because of its enthusiasm, originality, success and the tremendous pride it created throughout the halls of Central High School.

LET'S MAKE LOTS OF MONEY! OTAY?

The gymnasium begins to fill as the excitement increases. Finally, after two long, hard weeks of pushing Kathryn Beich candy bars, the day has arrived. Everyone is looking forward to the thrill of the many activities that are in store for them.

Each class has spent many hours trying to come up with the most hilarious, creative and all-around best class mascot. Brightly colored banners and streamers decorate the gym as vivacious students crowd into their seats. Down below on the gym floor, the anxious team participants discuss their plans of strategy. Everyone is fired up and ready to go as the competition begins! Winning becomes the main goal of each class. The mascots parade around the gym as the class members, in their decorative attire, cheer their team onward. Stacking boxes, rolling tires, blowing up balloons, and bobbing for apples rack up points for the individual classes.

Sign-ups, community projects, and candy sales have contributed to the long-awaited games. Finally, the class chants are heard. The Little Big Frosh try to yell louder than the Little Rascal Sophomores, while Sergeant Slaughter tries to "Crush, Kill, and Destroy" the Sharp dressed Seniors.

As the points were being tallied, each class waited in anticipation. The results showed the sophomores achieving an excellent victory with the juniors, freshmen, and seniors following. Another moneymaker had come and gone. Once again the cheers echoed throughout Central, the joys of winning and the agonies of defeat!

HOLIDAYS BRING FUN AND FESTIVE TIMES

What are the red lettered days on the calendars? They are holidays, of course. Holidays are special days of celebration, and Central is no exception to the festive events. The first big holiday of the school year is Halloween. From the midst of vacant hallways, spooky corners, and empty classrooms lurk every sort of ghost and goblin imaginable. Going to haunted houses seemed to be favorite among Centralites. Some students relived their childhood years by going trick-or-treating or even by just passing out candy to little kids. November brought us Thanksgiving as we remembered our founding fathers. This was also a very special day as Mr. and Mrs. Turkey Legs of the faculty was announced. Mr. Roger Price and Mrs. Kathy Northup were given the high honor. Soon the jingle bells began to ring and Christmas was on its way. Christmas seemed to be almost everybody's favorite holiday. Junior John Brage exclaimed, "I like Christmas because all the Christmas cartoons and specials are on T.V." Soon Central really began to look like Christmas. Everywhere you went, Christmas decorations added sparkle to the school. The freshmen and sophomores decorated the Freshman Lobby while the juniors and seniors added their creativity to the gazebo. Student Senate took charge of making and selling candy-grams and mailing Christmas cards to individual homerooms. The holidays seemed to be a huge success and a fun, festive time for students and teachers alike.

GIRLS WIN HOMECOMING GAME

What one week out of the school year could you find people everywhere dressed in jean jackets and long scarves, clashing clothes, red and white and hats and sunglasses? The answer, of course, was Homecoming Week with Pajama Day, Devin Day, Herb Tarlek Day, Sweetheart Day (which landed on Valentine's Day), and the traditional Color/Hat/Sunglasses Day. To end the basketball season with style, Homecoming was set on February 16. The girls led Central to a smashing victory over Southwest with the boys playing an exciting close game. For the first time in a number of years, the queen was announced and crowned during halftime of the boys' game. Sherri Smith was crowned Snowfrost Queen with Rosie Schultz as Maid of Honor and Leah Weckerlin as First Attendant. The other attendants included Mary Divine, Jenny East, Paula Watkins, and Melissa Willis. After the game, the student body was invited to a dance with the band Zapp providing the music. Homecoming was a very busy and exciting week and a huge success! It was a time when the entire student body could get together and show what being a student at Central means to them.

ASSEMBLIES DISPLAY SPIRIT

"V-I-C-T-O-R-Y! That's the Central battle cry!" From the depths of the coliseum, chants and cheers along with peppy music, via the pep band, could be heard every Friday that Central played a home game. From football, volleyball, cross country, swimming and basketball to wrestling, baseball, track, golf and tennis, school spirit was elevated as the cheerleaders and pom pon girls worked hard to plan the entertainment. Pep assemblies provided the sports captains with an opportunity to encourage the student body to attend the games. The exciting agenda often included a cheer presented by the cheerleaders, a skit by a certain club, a pep talk by the coaches or captains, a dance by the pom pon girls, the ever famous wave and ended with the competitive battle cry! Nori Baker expressed, "The whole school gets together in one place and you can really feel the spirit. The pep assemblies really exemplify what Central High School is all about." Although pep assemblies appeared to be one of the few assemblies allowed due to classroom interruptions, they proved to be a success as well as a nice break in the average day.

CENTRAL BRINGS PLAY TO LIFE

"There's no business like show business!" This old saying became a reality when "Annie Get Your Gun" came to life on Central's stage March 15, 16, 22, and 23. The first step in producing the wonderfully funny show was choosing the crews and committees. Tracy Allen, Brenda Barnes, Wendy Howard, Michelle Triplet and Amy Weir were chosen as the student directors. Their never-ending duties required them to spend unusual hours at school. Shelly Lamansky and Jenny Mullican captured the lead role as Annie Oakley while Chris Kemp and H. B. Taylor Were chosen to portray the charming Frank Butler. "Annie Get Your Gun" unfolded in the 1900's at Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show. It was here that Annie's talent as a sharpshooter was discovered. She joined Buffalo Bill's show and fell in love with Frank. As problems arose, Annie began to tackle them one by one in her own zany lovable way.

From the first day of planning to the endless rehearsals, Director Colleen Thom worked diligently to bring the crowd-pleasing show to stage. Mr. Tom Schneider directed the musical scores while Mr. Craig Swinarsky conducted the orchestra. After months of work, the play opened with an enormous bang that justified the saying, "There's no business like show business!"

GAMES SPARK ENTHUSIASM

This year's Senior-Faculty Games were executed with an exciting new twist. One of the new editions included a break dancing competition with Freddy Farmer as the overall winner. A faculty kazoo band led by baton twirling Heir Meir and a performance by the Glitter Girls brought more of the faculty into the spotlight. Once again the traditional senior guys vs. faculty men basketball game was won by the faculty. Senior girls and faculty women participated in a tug of war and a scooter race. "I liked the games better this year because they involved more of the student body," expressed Junior Amy Hausman. John Droghei, Monique Lucas and Jennifer Vollintine served as senior coaches. Faculty royalty were crowned at the games when the National Honor Society chose Mr. Roger Price and Mrs. Irene Bradahaw as king and queen. VICTORIES!

Anticipation. Big Crowds. Cheerleaders. Band music. Colorful uniforms. SPORTS! VICTORIES! Crowds came alive as the Indian athletes appeared full of pep and ready to compete for the number one spot. From every class and hallway students came to participate in their favorite sport.

The whole school was unified and the spirit level was boosted tremendously as everyone anticipated the game ahead. The height of such spirit could be overwhelmingly felt at the Jamboree and throughout homecoming week festivities. Where would we have been without sports? To many individuals at Central High, having the opportunity to excel in their favorite athletic contest was of major importance. They found in sports the incentive to perform their very best.

Of course, much time, time usually not seen by those students who did not participate in sports, was spent preparing for the "big game." Literally hours — after school and even during the summer — were spent sweating through practice sessions and designing strategy. Every minute was worth it though as the game finally began.

The Central athletes were undoubtedly winners. Their numerous victories allowed them to Reach New Heights!

PREPARATION PRODUCES POWER

Coach Harv Welch gave Kenny Mayo the sign from the sidelines. The athletes gathered in a huddle, Kenny called the play, and the team moved to the line. "Down. Set. Hut!" The ball was snapped to the quarterback. Pivoting and passing the CHS football team made their way down the field.

During the hours the team spent practicing, many different drills such as airplane spins, seat rolls, and carry overs were mastered. This was done repeatedly in order for players to sharpen their skills. The eager athletes also watched films of past games to look for ways of improvement. The seven football coaches were always there to give advice and encouragement. Seven coaches may have seemed like a lot, but there were actually four football teams: varsity, junior varsity, sophomore, and freshman. Coach Harv Welch led the varsity with much assistance from Tony Dudik and John Heerman. Bill Hedge and Tim Ellis coached the sophomores while Charles Blakely, Carl Chatfield and Bill Cook trained the freshmen.

Those not involved in football still enjoyed attending the games to support their friends. Parents and teachers were also there to watch. With everyone's mental attitudes combined, the football team was aroused to victory!

RUNNERS TRIUMPH

Stamina, endurance, and dedication were just a few qualities that made members of the cross country team so special. A cross country runner must have the stamina to keep on going when ordinary runners stop to rest, the endurance to finish the last mile, and the dedication to train every day, rain or shine. The team had vigorous practices every night after school. Some of their meets were held early on Saturday mornings, which meant members had to go to bed early to be in top physical shape for their meet the next day.

The girls varsity team got off to a great start by beating every team except Jefferson City in their first meet at Kansas City. In the city meet the girls finished first, second, and third, with Kim Higdon leading the pack, followed by Kelly Higdon and Leanne Wegenka. The boys' team also performed well in the city meet, with Central's top varsity runner Scott Rubenstein finishing first and Jeff McCarthy finishing third. Coach John Chavez, with his positive attitude and knowledge, cheered his runners on. Julie Bachman commented, "Once you get used to the work, cross country is no problem — if you enjoy running at least thirty miles a week."

TENNIS TEAM OVERCOMES LOVE

Name the only sport where love is bad. Tennis, of course. During the blistering heat of the summertime, Central netters whacked away at the tennis balls. At 8:30 in the morning, when most students were sleeping, the tennis team was performing drills, having challenge matches and running. Huffing and puffing, the girls survived the strenuous activities and the heat of the summer. During school, the tennis team practiced the same drills only at different times. The training of the girls started at 3:00 and ended at approximately 5:00 p.m. Coach Randy Dedrickson was always there to encourage them on.

The girls approached their matches with assurance and a strong desire to do their best. Tracy Jones informed, "It takes determination to win a match." It also took a lot of deep concentration and strong team work to produce such a successful team and season!

TEEING OFF TO VICTORY

Remarkable was a word that best described the Central High girls golf team. Despite the fact that there were a small number of golfers, there was extraordinary talent! The team was coached by Mr. Perry and made up of five girls: Sherry Smith, Rosie Schultz, Andrea Taylor, Vickie Rickel, and Missy Hausman. The girls certainly strove to work as a team and not as individuals. With support from others, it was easier to put forth their best effort. Rosie Shultz commented, "Our team has really improved from last year. We set a goal to win a trophy at state and we did. We received third place! Awesome!" Not only did the group do well, but Rosie and Sherri received medals. The golfers also won the city title. By setting a goal and striving for it, the girls golf team Reached New Heights!

SET TO CONQUER

Bumps? Spikes? Sets? To someone unfamiliar with the vigorous game of volleyball these terms may have seemed quite strange. To the Central girls' volleyball team, however, these words were just as familiar as the words tests and homework. If a student ever stayed after school and heard yells of "I've got it!" coming from the gym, it was most likely the volleyball team practicing diving for the ball.

The girls were full of pep at the games. Their overwhelming spirit helped lead them to many victories. The spirit of the varsity team could clearly be seen right before a game as all the girls gathered in a circle on the gym floor. They crouched on their knees, pounded on the floor with their hands and then did a backwards somersault!

Volleyball was clearly a team sport. This year the varsity team had a new leader, Coach Laura Taube. Kerri Wells commented, "Our new coach was more like a friend. She treated each of us with respect." Janet Deshon was the assistant coach. Everyone worked together to produce a smashing season.

YOUNG TEAM EXCELS

If one turned his eyes for even a moment, much action and suspense was missed. Fast paced and always entertaining, the sport of basketball continued to be a favorite at CHS. For some fans "basketball" brought to mind names like Larry Bird or Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. For Central High students, it brought to mind players like John Droghei or Pat Hinchey. John Droghei was the only senior on this year's varsity team. Sparked by his enthusiasm, the young team united together to give basketball their best shot. Coached by Sam Sharp and Denny Kurtz, the varsity and JV teams worked diligently. It was not easy work because time and persistence were necessities.

Two other important squads were the sophomore and freshman teams. Coached by Frank Wheeler and Paul Athens, these players showed their skills and gained experience for future years. Win or lose, each team consistently played hard and with high spirits.

HIT ME WITH YOUR BEST SHOT

Extraordinary! The Central High Girls' Basketball team possessed enormous athletic talent. Made up of nine highly skilled girls, the varsity team gained victory after victory as the season unfolded. Not only were the girls outstanding individually, but they exhibited impressive teamwork. "This year we're a lot closer and that makes us more aggressive and faster," commented Lisa Hughes. Seniors Rosie Schultz, Jennifer Vollintine, a sister team of Monique and Tressa Lucas, and junior Lisa Hughes were the starters and the sparkplugs. Rebounding, dribbling, shooting, and passing, the CHS girls moved swiftly and were alert to all opportunities. They were coached by Mary K. Hyde who was assisted by Jim Perry. Coach Perry also coached the junior varsity team. Both coaches worked hard to help each girl achieve her highest potential. Practices began early in the year for the team, so it was essential that each girl be present for strenuous activities such as running and lifting weights. These practices were not just attended by the coaches and team players. Lori Young, Amy Wyrick, Julie Wood, and Heather Bradshaw volunteered to serve as managers and were a vital asset to the team.

CENTRAL WRESTLING THE SPORT FOR MEN

"One of the most exciting aspects about a wrestling meet is that everyone gets involved," commented Ron Bates. Everyone? Yes, everyone participates in the action, especially the mothers. They can usually be seen jumping up and down yelling and cheering for their favorite wrestler.

Considering that there were only three seniors on the team, the Central grapplers had a productive season. "I think we had a rebuilding year, and next year we will really be tough. I know that I will be," confided John Casey. In wrestling there are thirteen weight divisions, and the wrestlers are often asked to lose as many as eight pounds in two days. Vigorous practices helped make losing weight easier. The practices were held every night after school for two and a half hours. During these sessions the team drilled, ran, and wrestled non-stop. The team was guided by a combination of Head Coach Tony Dudik, Assistant Coaches John Heerman and Don Piveral, and State Qualifier Craig Phillips who graduated in 1984. With the help of this special attention and assistance, the grapplers met their goals and became the best they could be.

TEAM DIVES TO VICTORY

Central's young swim team succeeded to swim to victory under the leadership of Heir Mier. Barefoot by the water, with pants rolled securely beneath his knees, he directed his team from the side of the pool. "The enjoyment I get from being coach is getting to watch determined swimmers bring their times down," Heir Mier stated. The young team reached its heights not only by capturing almost everything they went out for, but by size as well. Keegan Jackson commented, "Our team was larger this year, making it a lot more fun."

The team was made up of various individuals who excelled in many ways. Heir Mier named Scott Rubenstein most valuable in 1985 with Jandle Johnson close behind. Sean Divine, in his first year on the team, improved most by hard work and dedication. "Swimming is an individual sport," Sean explained, "and one must apply himself to reach a personal goal." All swimmers and divers followed this plan and all were successful in making 1985 great!

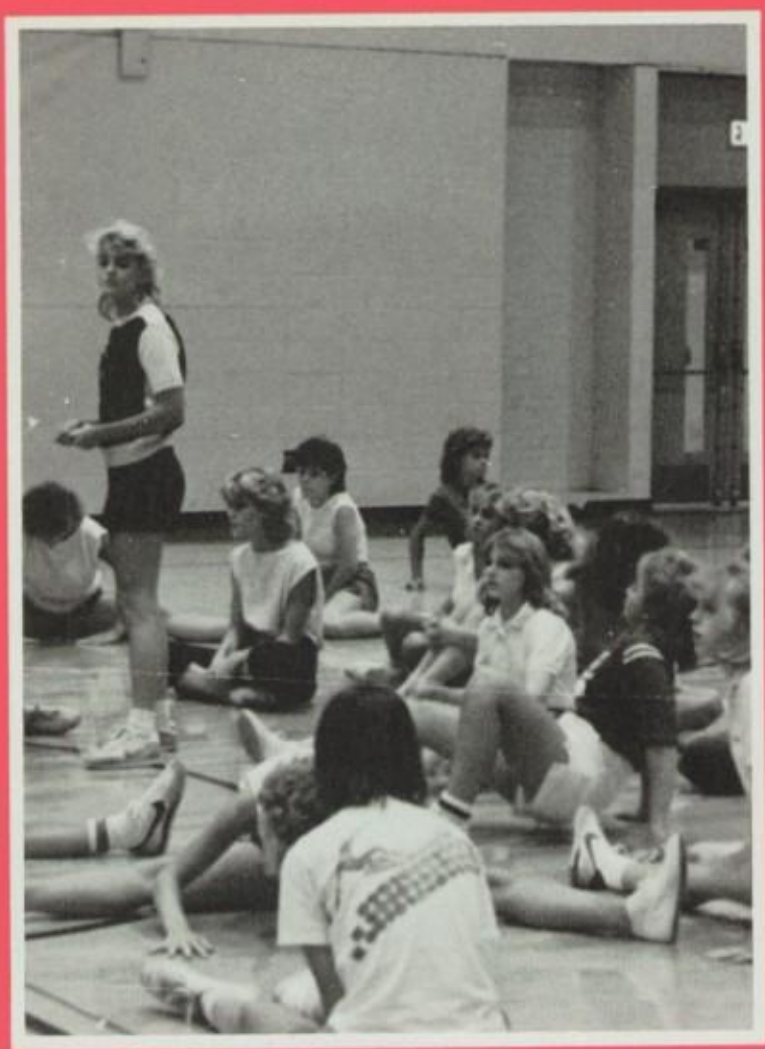
MEETINGS!



Brriinng!! The 2:35 bell rings and Frankie Freshman leaves school to go home to watch reruns of the "Brady Bunch." As he looks into the screen of the T.V. he sees how much fun the six Brady kids are having because they are involved with their school's activities.

A commercial is shown and Frankie asks himself a question, "Is there a club at Central for me?"

In answer to Frankie's question, yes, there is a club for everyone at Central. Those interested in Math, the Geometry Club; in Art, the Brush and Pencil Club; in Science, The Chem/Physics Club; and those with an abundance of pep and sparkle, the Pom Pon girls and the Cheerleaders. From the first day you walk into Central as a freshman you dream and wonder what clubs you wish to belong to. As the days go by, the announcements come over the P.A. system loud and clear. "Those interested in the French Club meet after school in room . . . " "Tryouts for show choir will be tomorrow . . . "

People meet together and officers are elected. That is the beginning of the exciting year as a club member! From there the possibilities are unlimited. Some groups meet often while others do not. Some plan trips, picnics, tee-shirts, and banners for the football homecoming parade. A club can only go so far without money. So moneymakers are invented. The club members become professional sales people as they market the product their club is selling.

As Frankie becomes more established in his activities at school, he realizes that everyone should get involved.

Clubs play a very important role in the lives of many students. Club sponsors, moneymakers, officers and every club member allow students to meet new people, learn new things, and Reach New Heights.

COMMUNICATION GAP CLOSED BY COUNCIL

Once again Central High climbed to new heights and beyond. This year the Student Body Officers took great strides in their accomplishments with the student body, by closing the communication gap between the administration and the school's population.

A group of four young adults, Devin Scherubel, Marilyn Thompson, Rosie Schultz, and Mike Gentry, captured a feeling of great pride in their school. From the senior class ten people were appointed into the president's advisory cabinet. Each member chosen, by Devin was from a different "group" of the school. They were chosen this way to promote different ideas that needed to be voiced.

Through the executive council's determination and high hopes, these born leaders shaped Central into its fullest potential: A mountain above all other schools.

GUIDES TO THE FUTURE

Dan Dzubay, Brett Halsey, and Julie Bishop led the 1985 seniors through a successful year. The senior officers were chosen by the class to guide them to the commencement of their future. The officers organized the many important events that led to the graduation. Light blue annoucements were chosen to tell the senior students' friends and relatives that the 1985 graduating class was ready to become "full fledged adults." The huge job of reuniting the class after graduation lies in the officers' hands. In 1990, according to Julie Bishop, the first reunion will be held to see classmates and reminisence about the past. For juniors, "The year of 1984-85 seemed to be the year of adversity. Through the help of the spirited juniors we were able to raise enough money for a prom that everyone enjoyed," expressed Thad Evans. The juniors had difficulty earning enough money and for a while one question rumored the halls of Central. "Will there be a prom?" Congratulations Thad, Kristin, amd Trisha for making a successful year for the junior class and honoring the seniors with their traditional prom.

UNDERCLASSMEN LOOKING AHEAD

Being a leader to 467 freshmen can be a thrilling experience, but extremely difficult at times. Lemuel Moore, freshman class president, accepted the challenge of uniting his fellow classmates. With the help of Stephanie Fuller, Jenni Stevens, and the student senators, the newcomers were transformed into the one and only graduating class of 1988. The students successfully completed their first year at Central with high hopes for the future.

Winning the moneymaker was a fantastic accomplishment for the sophomores. Class officers Kate Reed, Dana Mizell, and Sally Geha worked hard to lead their energetic class to an unforgettable victory. Enthusiasm was the key to the success of the sophomore class. Now comfortable with the halls of Central, the class of '87 is looking forward to their next two years as upperclassmen.

Largest and Oldest Clubs Earn Respect

Chem-Physics and Forum Club have both earned their spots as highly respected clubs at Central. Chem-Physics was the largest club this year with 130 members. It was formed by Chem I, Chem II, Physics, and Science Investigations students. Chem II student Darla Schildknecht explained, "You learn a lot even though you're having fun." One activity of the club was to sponsor dances for its members throughout the year. Spices were sold by the scientists in order to pay for these dances. "In Chem-Physics we chose a practical aspect of science and turned it into fun," described Marilyn Thompson, president of the club.

Forum Club, the oldest club at Central, met to discuss the controversial current events of the world. Senior Mike Gentry liked Forum Club because he felt it gave high school students the opportunity to freely express their feelings about important controversial issues. President Ted Corless directed the meetings and stated the topics, usually in question form, to get the discussion started. Vice-President Mary Divine chose the topics which covered many broad areas. "Everyone can state their own opinion and be respected for it," expressed Senior Dawn Peters.

CLUBS FOCUS ON FUTURE

Planning ahead for the future was an idea focused on by several young men and women in the business clubs. After taking business classes, these young people became involved in clubs that helped them to learn more about the working world.

Distributive Education Clubs of America was created to develop vocational skills and guide its members into the job market.

A club that had a majority of ladies as members, was created to brighten outlooks on the business world. Future Secretaries of America helped its members sharpen their clerical abilities of typing and shorthand.

"VICA helped me to prepare for my future. I learned what to expect in the business community," Dee Piercy explained about the Vocational Industries Club of America. VICA was offered to students who traveled to Hillyards each day. This club, like all business clubs at CHS strove to help its members set goals and promote positive aspects of business.

SPIRIT RETURNS, LET'S HEAR A CHEER!!!!

Hey! Hey! What do you say, CHS? This was the chant of thirty-four energetic girls this year. "The Cheerleaders' main goal for this year was to bring the spirit back into Central," exclaimed Varsity Co-captain Heidi Ehlert. To support the football and basketball players 100%, the girls attended all out-of-town games.

The Varsity and Junior Varsity Cheerleaders sold popcorn and the freshmen sold Christmas wrapping paper for new uniforms. Cheerleading Sponsor Mrs. Jamie Green boasted, "This year's girl were all very hard working. You couldn't ask for more."

Cheerleaders, along with the help of the Pom Pon squad, conducted many of the fun and spirit filled pep assemblies.

A special achievement for the Pom Pon squad was being able to perform a half-time show for a Kansas City Kings' basketball game. Every day after school the girls practiced for an hour to learn new routines and to perfect every move. Captain Melissa Willis summed up the group as, "Close Knit. We worked well together."

HAVING FUN FOREIGN STYLE

French club was exceptionally active this year. During the football homecoming week members created a banner that was presented in honor of the football players and the Queen.

One of their first meetings involved installing new members. First year French students were required to stand in front of the older members and speak or perform in French. This initiation tradition was embarrassing for some, but it created a bond of friendship for each "old" and "new" member.

Latin club members that were installed at the end of the 1984 school year kept this club active. They, too, participated in the homecoming banner contest. The club won first place with their theme of "Rome over the Redbirds." Approximately twenty people were at the football game to display their banner by carrying it around the Noyes Field Track.

The Foreign Language potluck dinner and dance was attended by many French and Latin members. This annual event was held at the end of the blustery month of October. It provided a night of enjoyment for everyone involved.

ACCENTING CULTURES

With a touch of All-Star Wrestling, the German Club designed a homecoming banner with the slogan "Cobra Clutch the Cardinals." The meetings for the making of the banner started the year off right for all of the members. Doug Field shared, "As treasurer of the German Club, I've worked hard but still managed to have fun."

A club with a little more seriousness involved was the Spanish Club. A progressive dinner began the year for this group. During Foreign Language Week, the club decorated the display cases with many items that represented the Spanish culture. These clubs offered foreign language students the opportunity to become more active at Central.

MUSIC CAPTURES SPIRIT

CHS Show Choir captured audiences by taking them through different musical eras. "Oldies" and "modern/contemporary" tunes were performed by the group under the theme of American Pop. This musical selection contained the number one songs that created the musical era of rock-n-roll.

The choir displayed their talents by participating in many civic functions and several out-of-town swing choir contests. They did well in every activity they performed in. "They worked as a single unit," Director Tom Schneider proclaimed.

MWSC Homecoming Parade was the "kick off" of the choir's year. The members displayed their talents to the community of St. Joseph as they danced through the streets.

Another musical group at Central had an exciting and fun year. The Pep Band performed at many sporting events, always encouraging the teams to achieve victory by marching down the halls of Central playing their special tunes, the Pep Band sparked enthusiasm into their fellow classmates. A favorite activity of the musicians was performing during the pep assemblies. Their music helped bring the halls of Central alive.

SOPHS BEGIN NEW CLUB

Geometry is no longer just a course. The class of '87 devised a new club this year, known as the Geometry Club, of course. "For the fall homecoming parade, we wanted to make a banner but you had to be sponsored by a club, so we created the Geometry Club," explained Rob Wagner.

Robby Garrison added, "We asked Mrs. Piveral and she approved it. Kristin Wright designed some tee shirts for us and that was the beginning." Meetings were held on Sundays at the students' homes. Each geometry class had a representative that read the minutes from each meeting and collected dues. "Geometry Club helps me a lot because sometimes class time just isn't enough," expressed Dean Testerman. The club was open to anyone enrolled in a geometry class. Next year it will be interesting to see if the class of '88 continues this club which started out as a whim but attracted over 60 members.

ANGIE GAINS HIGH HONOR!

Throughout recent years the membership enrollment of the national Forensics League has increased dramatically. The league was introduced to a new leader this year when Ms. Lou Ann Mahlandt became their coach. Dean Testerman expressed, "She's young and communicates easily with our age group."

In order to become a member of NFL, the students were required to earn 25 points, by competing at speech and debate tournaments. One member was extremely dedicated and managed to acheive over 700 points in three years of competition. Junior Angie Nelson was the first to ever receive this honor.

EXCITEMENT SPARKED

Blue and white flags, under the control of the Flag Girls, twirled through the air at the half time shows of the fall football games. They moved to the beat of the marching band. Michelle Triplet led the girls to their perfect synchronization as the captain of the squad. During the performing season the girls rehearsed their moves every school day in fourth hour. One special project the girls undertook was the Missouri Western Homecoming Parade. After following the band through the chilly streets of St. Joseph, Michelle Triplet described the dedication of these girls. "We tried to accent the band with our colors. The fun along with the hard work was a sign of our dedication. It's something we, the squad, will remember for a long time," expressed Michelle.

Spirit at Central's wrestling matches was led by the Wrestling Cheerleaders. These girls sparked excitement into the crowds. That excitement in turn was easily guided to the wrestlers which helped to produce a successful year. The Cheerleaders traveled with the team to the majority of the out-of-town wrestling meets. They created a home-like atmosphere for the wrestlers no matter how far away from St. Joseph they traveled. Marla Wilson remarked, "We really enjoyed supporting the wrestlers and cheering them on to victory!"

Members of Upward Bound spent their time doing daily homework while Miss Denise Lloyd encouraged them to improve their study habits. Weekly tutoring sessions were held after school to help these students. Upward Bound is a federally funded program focused on increasing the number of students enrolling in college or vocational schools. Some members continued in the summer program, taking courses five days a week for college credits.

Another organization here at Central, based on a different sort of achievement, was the Brush and Pencil Club. Students tried out each semester by turning in two timed drawings, which were voted on by returning members. Secretary-Treasurer Vickie Rickel commented, "We're all artists who like to get together and have fun." Members painted holiday scenes at K-Mart to raise money. They also sold candy and raised several hundred dollars for trips to Kansas City for various cultural events.

CLUB'S RETIREMENT ADDS TO ANOTHER

7:15 a.m. rolled around quickly for many of the Junior Spirit Force members. Every Friday when a home game was played the members were at school pepped up and ready to solicit people to support the teams and help to raise money for the Junior-Senior Prom.

Items sold ranged from buttons, to calendars, to blue and white school T-shirts. Thad Evans was heard over the P.A. system to announce the selling of the pep items and to encourage the spirit of the students.

Another spirited group was the National Honor Society. With the retirement of the Senior Leadership Club, NHS had many new responsibilities invested in them.

Registration for the incoming classes was lead by NHS. They were there to guide the freshmen through the long endless halls of Central.

Bringing together the freshman class through a dance was another task to be accomplished by the club. The theme "The Love Boat" was used to spark new friendships as if living in the close quarters of a cruise ship.

As the 1984-85 school year wound down to a close, the 1988 class set high goals to Reach New Heights like the National Honor Society performed this year.

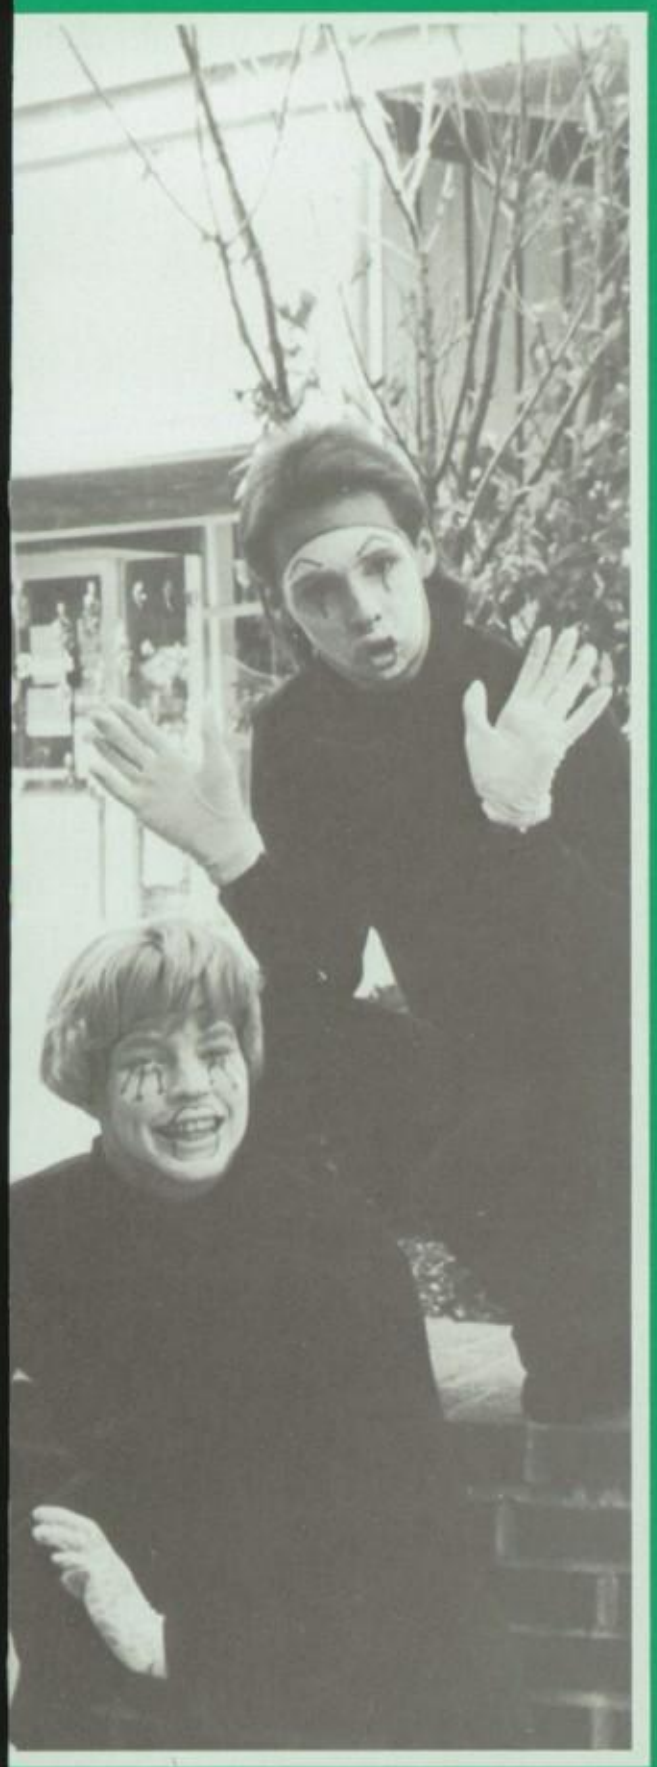
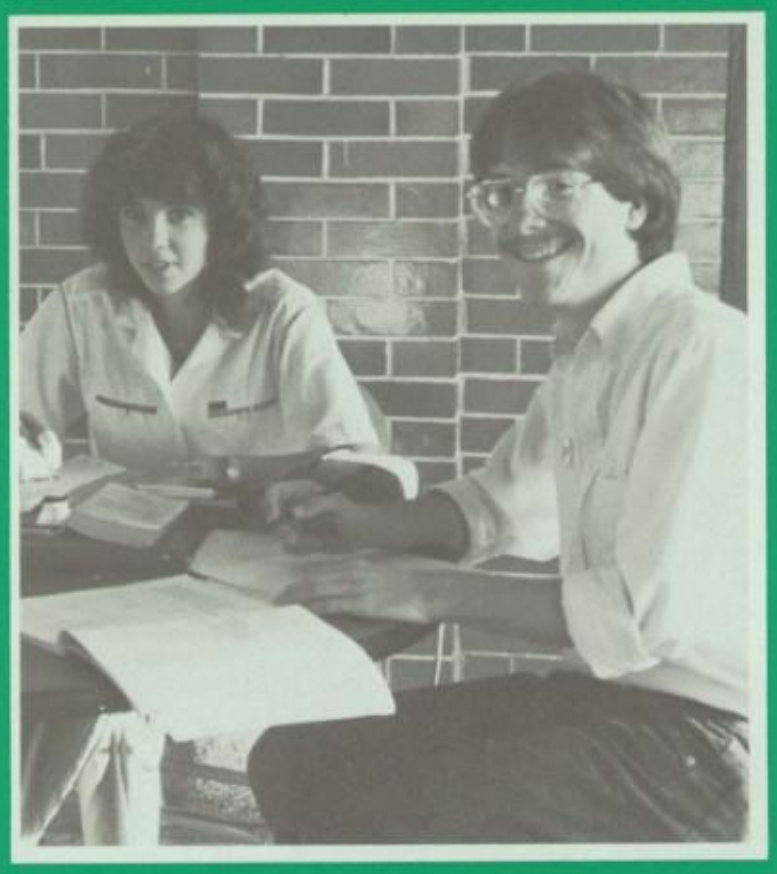
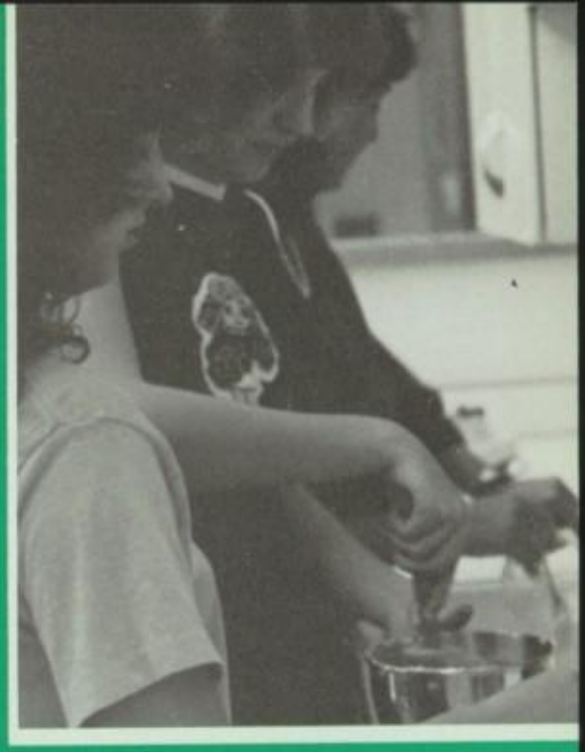
SCHEDULES!







Schedules, they may have you dashing, dodging, and racing through the halls, but they are what school is all about. You hear from your peers, parents, teachers, etc., that you must get a good education to survive this day and age. How true!! Several times we may ask ourselves, why do I put up with it? Why don't I just quit? Something, however, keeps us coming, studying, and working hard. What may that something be? A career? College? The choice is yours! One of the most important habits which a person must develop in order to reach that choice, is studying.

Studying takes on many forms among students. Some like to go home, sit in front of the tube with a tall, ice cold glass of Coke and a bag of chips to concentrate on their homework. (We only ask, how much concentration is present?) Other students prefer to wait. They can be seen in the morning before school scattered throughout the halls. Often this occurs in front of the open locker, in a small group, and with books and papers littering the halls. (Of course, some gossip tidbits may creep in between problems three and four on geometry.) The seniors, however, wish to study in style. They tend to dominate the Gazebo as it is the best place in school to catch a nap, study, and gossip all at the same time. Whatever your form of study and wherever your schedule will take you in the halls of Central, always be Reaching New Heights.

ENGLISH PROVIDES A USEFUL TOOL FOR LIFE

Do you remember back when you used to say "ain't," and every other sentence you spoke had double negatives? That was at least 32 book reports, 17 short stories and an unimaginable number of spelling tests ago. As a freshman you probably learned the intricacies of the English language and "ain't ain't a word" even though it is in the dictionary. Who could forget the tedious work of learning the school pledge and song. The sophomores traveled back in time as they read the adventurous books The Odyssey and Animal Farm. Sophomores also enhanced their writing expertise by brainstorming and keeping journals. Juniors, after reading the works of famous American authors, were encouraged to let their personal experiences and imaginations flow through their fingertips. After completing all of these dearly loved courses the seniors were given a choice. They had to decide whether they wanted to give their English knowledge a year to sink in, or continue the adventure. Whether you are a freshman or a senior you have the comfort of knowing that, "English is a tool you can use for the rest of your life," stated Mr. Barry Reynolds.

STAFFS SCOOP THE NEWS

Deadlines! They always seem to get people uptight, yet newspapers revolve around deadlines. Journalism students had the thrilling experience of being introduced to the hair ripping and teeth gnashing aspects of deadlines as two OUTLOOK staffs were born. Staffers could be found with pen and paper in hand scouting the halls for any and all news items. Beat assignments helped the staffs get most of their news items, as everyone on staff was assigned to a department head or administrator. As deadlines drew near, stories were created and editors took over editing and getting last-minute details completed for the printer. One of journalism's important aspects is to get quotes that support the facts. "We strove to get a lot of feedback from the student body and the administrators," explained Christine Bailey, second semester editor-in-chief. By the end of their working semester, the OUTLOOK staffs had grown close together. They had learned to work as teams; teams that set high goals and gave 100 percent of their effort to the OUTLOOK.

STAFF REACHES NEW HEIGHTS

Memories, they can never be replaced. They hold a very special place in the hearts of everyone. These memories may be of friends, family, holidays, funtimes, and yes, even of school. High school is an important part of a young person's life, and it provides many memories. A school yearbook is something held dear to everyone. Inside it are activities which happened throughout the school year as well as all of a person's classmates.

The 1985 WAKITAN staff put their heads together and, as a whole, tried to capture all of the memories of the school year. Reaching New Heights presented a new, enlightning, and colorful theme. Creating a black cover with full color pictures on the front and throughout the introduction was a big step for the staff in Reaching New Heights. The staff feels they have done their best in trying to capture the memories of Central by collaborating all of their ideas into a unique book. Strong leadership and guidance from Mrs. Lynette Barr, advisor, and Jim Reed, assistant from Walsworth Publishing company, helped the staff to meet five major deadlines and to complete the book on time.

The 1985 yearbook staff sincerely hopes that they have done a sufficient job of capturing your memories as a Central High School student. Co-editor Wendy Howard expressed, "Our goal was to elaborate on the highlights of the year, those involving Central and the people in it. We strove to create the feeling of individual goals and wishes obtained in the 1984-85 year by always Reaching New Heights."

TAKING THE FOREIGN CHALLENGE

While some students were struggling with the English language, others were meeting the challenge of a foreign tongue. As time progressed, students began to come to some understanding of the language. Usually pupils do not begin to think in a dialect until their later years of study. Mrs. Melanie Adams, foreign language teacher, proposed three sure ways to prove fluency. "You speak and write in the language without realizing it. Another is, your dreams are full of people who speak the language you are studying." Recently the varieties of speech have become a fad. In the lower levels of Latin and upper levels of French, enrollment has doubled since last year. "I believe the push by the counselors, parents, and nation have helped to influence the students. In the upper levels the students have more of a "family-like" feeling towards one another, since there's a possibility they have had their first year of the language together," concluded Mrs. Melanie Adams.

CULTURES SPEAK

Foreign languages presented students with a variety in their everyday school schedules. Not only do students learn a lot about costumes, traditions and the languges of other people, but they have fun in the process. Spanish and German are two foreign language clases offered at Central in which students do a variety of activities. Both participate in the Foreign Languge Banquet in the fall of the year which gives students an opportunity to meet others who have the same interests in foreign languages as they do.

German students also ventured outside the classroom to the Octoberfest at Worlds of Fun and the Renaissance Festival in Kansas City. Students learned traditions and cultures of European countries on these excursions.

James Sharp remarked, "I think German was a complicated subject, but with the trip to the Renaissance Festival, studying the cultures was easier."

Spanish dealt mainly with the cultures of people. For a variety in everyday note taking, students were allowed to bring in Spanish related food. Amanda Hay explained, "In addition to cooking and eating Mexican dishes, we learned the value of having a second language."

LOOK TO THE FUTURE

From sociology and psychology to American government and world cultures, the variety of courses offered to Central students seemed almost endless. "We want to build a better future by avoiding the mistakes of the past. We also wanted the students to be aware of the world around them," stated Mrs. Carol Gilpin.

Being an election year, many government students found themselves watching history in the making. The presidential candidates and their platforms were the topics of many classroom discussions. Mrs. Ruth Newhart's government classes were involved in many activities concerning the elections. Not only did the students prepare an oral presentation on the candidates' platforms, issues, or personalities, but they were required to design an eye catching and informative bulletin board on the elections in general or the candidates.

History offered an insight into the past and present day situations. With such a variety, one could almost be assured of choosing a class he or she would find interesting.

MATH: QUEEN OF SCIENCE

The "Queen of Science" is full of mystery, waiting for a Sherlock Holmes to decide all the intricate messages it holds. Carl Chatfield stated, "Nothing is ever accomplished without hard work, but those who work hard will learn." Learning was definitely on the top of the list for 90% of the student body. They enrolled in math courses regardless of their many job schedules and personal activities.

Math is a simple word for the complicated and complex subject to which it refers. The various areas of study were divided into separate levels in the math department. In any level, however, with each correct answer, feelings of personal triumph overwhelmed the individual as well as the teacher. Confusion slowly became understanding. Continual understanding soon turned into the love of learning. Miss Frances Walsh explained it best, "To acquire knowledge is necessary, but to accomplish how to love to learn is tremendous! It is extremely rewarding to see a student fall in love with knowledge."

THE LANGUAGE OF THE FUTURE

In Central's relatively young computers department, a new advanced computer programming class burst upon the scene. The idea for this class struck Ms. Linda Gillett when she discovered that the first computer course a student takes in college is in Pascal. It worked so effectively it was adopted for use in many businesses.

The school district didn't have the software for a class in Pascal so they went to Radio Shack, who provided them with the first network of Pascal software in the nation. The major advantage of using a network instead of individual software is that all of the terminals have access to the same information off of the disk drive and access to the printer. The latter enables any student to make printouts without having to hook up a separate printer.

This was the first year that this class was offered, and due to the restrictions, few of the 83-84 juniors were allowed to take the prerequisite basic computer classes. Thus, the first semester session was comprised mostly of juniors who had previous experience in computer programming. Another class that was offered was the basic computing course.

Junior Kathy Hutchison commented, "I think that it was a good class and I liked it a lot. I also feel that it prepared me for the future because the future will be full of computers."

WHAT DO YOU WANT TO BE?

Little Johnny wants to become a famous stenographer for a large company. He excitedly waits for the day that he will become a Centralite. Here at Central, Johnny can fulfill his dreams. When reigstration day arrives he enrolls in typing and accounting classes, for Johnny knows that these classes will help him in a future career.

Sally, on the other hand, has no conceivable idea what she wants to do with her life, so she takes a "careers in the 80's" course. This class opens up the world of possible careers. Sally soon discovers that practical business, general business, or personal typing would be a great help in any career field.

When little Johnny and Sally grew up, they became very prosperous in their work. They established their own place in this ever growing world of careers.

Here's an answer for the next time someone asks you that age old question, "What do you want to be when you grow up?" Just smile and say in your most professional voice, "I am presently enrolled in clerical practice at the one and only Central High School!"

SCIENCE ADDS EXCITEMENT!

"If it's green, it's biology; if it stinks, it's chemistry; and if it doesn't work, it's physics." Sound familiar? This was one way of looking at science as expressed by Mr. Roger Price to his students. The enrollment in science has skyrocketed in the past two years. With a great variety of courses offered, students with any kind of interest were able to find exactly what they were looking for. The grand arrival of the new lab tables brought about great excitment in Mr. Price's and Mr. Ruele's rooms as classes debated over who would be the first to break them in.

The science department of Central is quite unique and interesting. Teachers sometimes go to extremes to get a point across to their students. Everything from setting up a fake arrest, to special days honoring people such as Mr. Rogers, Roy G. Biv, and Carl Sagan, to throwing objects outside the third floor window have provided some interesting days in class. Though these activities may seem like pure fun to the average individual, there was always an important concept being taught.

The world of science is greatly expanding and becoming sort of a craze. To provide an opportunity for students interested in extending their scientific knowledge, Saturday Science Seminars were born. These seminars were developed for freshmen of the three high schools in St. Joseph, allowing them to explore various areas of science on their own.

COMPUTERS AID DISABLED

During the year, the orthopedically handicapped were working with the future's latest toy, the computer.

According to Mrs. Dorothy Norton, teaching assistant, these students accomplished more than was expected of them. In the beginning of the school year it was necessary to help the students, but as time went by, the pupils became more independent. This electronic thinking device enabled them to master the learning skills that their peer groups were familiar with. These educational skills consisted of reading, spelling, math, history, and some students even studied the Constitution.

Being extremely content with their achievements was the end result for the students. "Seeing the students accomplish something on their own was a great thrill for me," assured Mrs. Norton. The main purpose of the activities with computers was for the pupils to achieve personal satisfaction with themselves and their work.

DESHON DEVELOPS APPRECIATION FOR ART

A quick trip to the store left students with pencils, paper, charcoal, paints, sketchbook, and the overwhelming desire to be among the gifted artists like Monet, DeShon, and da Vinci. Oddly enough, one of those names sounds vaguely familiar. But which one? DeShon, that's the one. This artist who has found her career at Central High School graduated with a Bachelor of Fine Arts Certificate at Missouri Western. This year she devoted her time to a classroom full of future Picasso's.

There are scholars who would rather be in a classical music course or building something in an industrial arts class, maybe even fluttering around on their toes in tights and slippers, anything but creating harmonious paintings, drawings, or sketches of life. "Two achievements I wanted to attain during the 84-85 school year were that everyone would leave with a good feeling about art in general, and I also hoped they would leave with appreciation and enjoyment," expressed Mrs. DeShon. There was no doubt that DeShon's feat triumphed. After all, some really enjoyed art when Halloween came. The halls were brimming with DeShon's successful exploit.

I.A. STUDENTS COMPETE

Industrial art classes provided numerous students with bountiful skills. In the various courses of I.A., students participated in individual competition, local battles, and a contest held at NWMSU. If they qualified, they went all the way to state competition. The small engines class participated in a contest where each person was given a motor that did not run. The students were to bring the motor back to working condition, with no help from the instructor, so it would run effectively. To top it off, they were required to take a written test. Most I.A. classes are avocational, meaning that projects are done as relaxing work. Other classes, such as small engines, are prevocational in which they mildly touch on jobs in the industrial arts field. "The goal of the I.A. classes was for the students to become aware of the materials and how to handle them," Mr. Roger Fisher stated.

HOME ECONOMICS - NOW MORE THAN EVER

Eggbabies! Yes, several home economics students became eggparents this year! Sound Exciting? This project caused great joy and yet some sorrow. Mrs. Jean Grunwald decided to have a different and fun project for her students. They were to use an egg, bed it down, dress it up, give it a name, and personality. To add to all that, the students were to carry on their eggparents' duties by taking their eggbaby everywhere with them (they were only allowed one free babysitter). The great sorrow came when if, by some mishap, the dutiful parent dropped the baby! Ouch!! But it was all fun. The purpose of the eggbabies was to teach the students how much responsibility is involved in raising children.

This program was just part of the new curriculum for the home economics classes. Last spring, the teachers from grades 7-12 got together and developed a new curriculum placing emphasis on the semester courses of consumer homemaking and contemporary living at the high school level. They attached the theme, Home Economics - Now More Than Ever, to the program. An added feature was the home economics fair where prizes were awarded to students.

ROTC WANTS YOU!

At ease Central High School, this year's ROTC had to present arms to Lieutenant Colonel Dick Wright and Sergeant Richard Sharp. About face, because these men weren't ready for a parade rest, they were out to make Central's ROTC numero uno. "Right - shoulder - arms!" exclaimed an officer as the companies participated in contests such as the Annual Rifle Competition and the Honor Guard Drill Competition. Success in the contests were highly unbelievable. Company fall in line, march! Hup two-three-four. "I would have liked to build citizenship in the students and pride in ROTC, at least get one-third of the student body interested in ROTC," explained Colonel Wright. Many of the privates, so to speak, lurked around the shadows of every hall staking out a victim to recruit. Their attempt to increase the number of members displayed enthusiasm among these future military personnel. So Beware! You never know when one of these hyper, anxious recruiters will take you hostage and demand a Yes-Sir!

A SLAP VS. A KISS

Communication is the key word in today's society. The way you express your feelings to each individual could mean the difference between a slap in the face and a kiss.

"In speech, as well as oral communications, we tried to build a positive self-image. With that attitude we helped students pass their messages accordingly," acknowledged Mrs. Nancy Piercy. Planning a variety of activities throughout the year made this goal possible. The students had a chance to role-play in radio programs and a television newscast. "This gave the students a taste of dealing with people and events outside of school," concluded Mrs. Piercy.

With a case full of trophies, the accomplishments of the speech and debate teams shone easily. "There were three main areas on which the debate classes built: organization, library skills, and the ability to speak to ANYONE," Ms. Lou Ann Mahlandt explained. As she looked about the room she exclaimed with a pleased smile, "Any one of these students can stand up, talk about numerous subjects, and speak intelligently on them."

TRAVELING THROUGH THE WORLD OF DRAMA

From learning behind stage techniques to performing on stage, drama students were able to express their thoughts and feeling whether it was through mime or telling a story. Students were able to display their talents for their peers in the very successful class presentations. One class performed a one-act play called "You're a Good Man Charlie Brown" which was a smash hit as several classrooms were invited to spectate. Other drama classes put on "Drama Antics." This presentation contained skits and exercises that actors often use to develop their theatrical skills. The audiences also enjoyed participating with the drama students in these antics. Not only did students work in class, but they also volunteered for drama excursions. The Mime Troup participated in Education Week at East Hills, entertaining the consumers as well as allowing them to enter the silent world of make believe and mime. Incoming freshmen also got a first-hand view of Central life with the drama department, as the Mime Troup led them on tours of the halls of Central. Whether you were an actor or a spectator, drama had a way of letting you travel without really leaving your seat.

As the soft hum of harmonious voices flowed throughout the auditorium, the captivated audiences listened attentively to Central's singing sensations. The choirs' fans were treated to four major concerts this year, one in the fall, the Christmas concert, a winter concert, and one in the spring. Mr. Tom Schneider, choir director expressed, "Music is important. It gives people a lot of freedom to express themselves. It takes a special person with a good attitude to perform."

Twenty gifted students took their talents all the way to district choir and three exceptional students made All-State Choir. The qualifiers were Cami Bennett, Leah Weckerlin, and Camille Crittendon.

Music Appreciation and Theory was an interesting course offered to students at Central. The class was created mainly for college bound music majors. It taught such things as music writing, ear training, and sight singing.

MIGHTY MOE SAYS SO! 110%

When the year began, a new band director, Mr. Craig F. Swinarsky, came to Central only to find a group of students disorganized but ready for work. Originally from Pequannock, New Jersey, Swinarsky attended Central Methodist College in Missouri and graduated in May of 84. While searching for employment, St. Joseph was top on the list of our current staff member. "I chose St. Joseph because of its size, administration, and potential improvement in the band program," he explained. Pride and self-discipline were the two areas stressed most. Throughout the vastness of the room were articles, drawings, cartoons, and letters to and about the band. "If I care enough about my band and show that it is an important part of my life, then it will be in their lives, too," emphasized Swinarsky. Pride 110%, the motto of our musicians this year, definitely aroused the morale of our CHS band. This type of attitude promoted an abundance of spirit throughout the season. Central High thanks the many band members for all their hours of practice and constant enthusiasm.

FRESHMEN VISIT A MORTUARY

Physical education and health, though required courses among high school students, proved to be interesting and educational. One of the health activities that the freshmen were most interested in was visiting a mortuary. Coach Denny Kurtz commented, "I think the students now have a better understanding of death; they had a chance to see the whole funeral home, and it made the chapter seem easier for them." During a semester of health, students not only learned about death, but also about drugs, sexuality, and being handicapped. The freshmen also worked with blindfolds and wheelchairs. This gave the students the experience and feeling of what it would be like to be disabled. There was even a wheelchair race for the pupils after they had been led blindly through the halls of Central, with a variety of blindfolds covering their eyes.

Physical fitness, more strenuous than health, was composed of running, exercising and weight lifting. The blistering heat or the glaciating cold never stopped Coach Sam Sharpe from calling in the troops. Coach Sharpe replied, "I think the students have adapted to this class very well, even if sometimes they had to run in the rain. This course basically prepared them for extra-curricular activities."

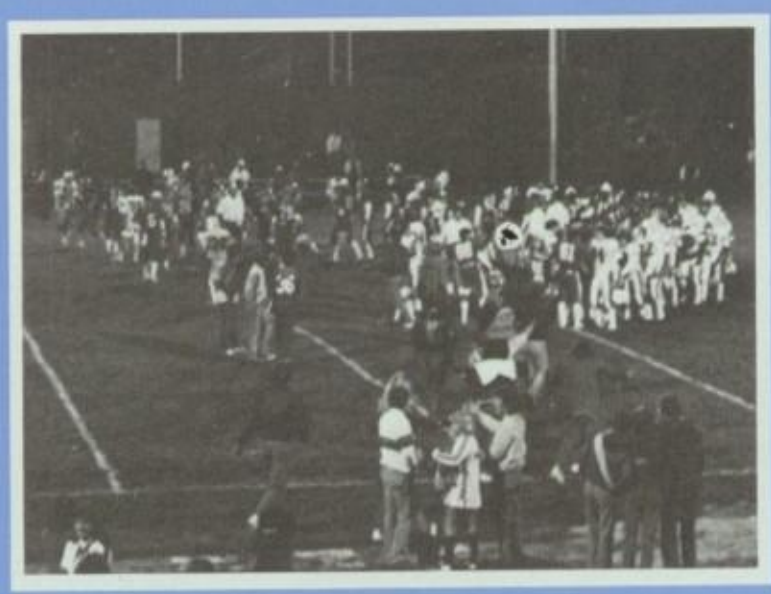
PERSONALITIES!



People, you see them every day. As you walk down the hall you say "Hi!" to your friends, stop and tell a joke, or catch up on the latest gossip. People are what makes school fun. They are the life and vitality of the classes. Each and every person is unique with individual interests and personalities. From the very first day you registered as a freshman, you were constantly surrounded by people. You lockered by your friends and admired the upperclassmen. As school went on, you met new friends. Your friends became the people who were interested in the same things you were. You met them through clubs, sports, and classes and the more involved you became the more people you met. Remember all the funny times that you laughed so hard you almost cried? Then there were times when you were down, upset, or just had a bad day. Your friends were always there to cheer you up or lend a helping hand. What was it about your friends that made them so special to you? It was their personalities, probably the most important thing you had in common with them. Soon though it came time for the final farewell. With tears in their eyes, the seniors said goodbye to their friends both old and new and to Central itself. With promises to always stay in touch, they left paving the way for another class to come in and begin Reaching New Heights through personalities.

ADMINISTRATION BACKS CHS DETERMINATION

Although there were many changes taking place throughout Central, the faithful and loyal Administration was always there to see them through. Leading the Administrators was Mr. Bill Tarpley along with the help of Mr. Sam Carneal, Mrs. Joyce Piveral and Mr. Jim Wallerstedt. These four people gave a lot of their time and effort to Central High. CHS owes a great deal to these busy caring people, for they were the backbone and the reason we were able to Reach New Heights.

COUNSELORS OFFER WORTHY ADVICE

Whenever it came to helping students with a problem, encouraging them to study harder, or assisting them with plans for their future, the counselors were always there to give their advice. These faculty members were happy to sit down with the students and help sort out any conflicts they were having. Mrs. Katharine Green believed the prime purpose of being a counselor is "to help students in the decision making process." The counselors were especially helpful to the freshmen since they were newcomers at Central. Starting high school is an exciting part of a person's life, and the counselors guided the freshman class every step of the way. The senior class also profited well from the counseling center by becoming aware of the many different colleges that were open to them. Counselors gathered information on financial aid, scholarships, and college entrance exams to share with the students in preparing them for their future. No matter what the need, the counselors were always there to listen and encourage the students of Central to Reach New Heights.

TEACHER, TEACHER, CAN YOU TEACH ME?

Dedicated to providing students with an education, 98 teachers lectured, administered exams, and graded stacks of papers. All this was done to help improve the young minds of Central, and the faculty strove for perfection in this area. School is an important part of a young person's life, and it sometimes became a second home to him. The teachers set up the ground rules and watched over the students to make sure they were applying themselves. Conduct was usually satisfactory, however, when trouble arose, discipline became involved.

This "teach and learn" relationship consisted of approximately 33 hours a week. Not many people would be interested in teaching individuals for that long a time period, but Central's teachers were dedicated to their jobs. Teaching is not a simple job. It requires patience, understanding, discipline, leadership, and an abundance of knowledge. These instructors were highly qualified in their individual fields of study.

Every teacher of every subject had something meaningful and important to convey to their students. It was the job of the students to be responsive to the ideas of their experienced educators. Each teacher had a different way of presenting material. It was this difference that captured the attention of the students and enhanced their minds. If every teacher taught in the same manner, boredom would soon overcome the students and nothing would be accomplished in the classrooms. Central's teachers are top notch. They deserve our thanks, admiration and most importantly our respect. They have dedicated their time, talents, and energy to help the students search for a better education. Without teachers, school would have no meaning or reason for existence. They are the backbone of Central High School, and we take pride in their accomplishments. In answer to the question, "Teacher, teacher, can you teach me?" one only needs to walk to the nearest classroom to find the answer.

ESPRIT

If you were a stranger walking through the halls of Central, you could easily recognize the seniors. They were the proud individuals who strutted by with their heads held high. This was the year they had been waiting for. Lounging in the gazebo, threatening the underclassmen, and taking American Government were a few of their main rewards for the four years of hard work they accomplished. The word senior denotes leadership, the kind of leadership which guides the rest of the student body throughout the year. The seniors elected Dan Dzubay, president; Brett Halsey, vice-president; and Julie Bishop, secretary-treasurer to guide them through an exciting year.

Excitement sparkled throughout the year, and during this time the realization of what was to come made its debut in many seniors' minds. It all sprouted with the dreaded testing of the ACT, SAT, and the SCAT for the more daring. College representatives gradually arrived as the year progressed. Scholarships were applied for and distributed later in the year. Slowly but surely decisions were being made and futures were planned.

Many seniors turned eighteen along the path towards graduation and were permitted to move out. They were finally able to be on their own and make their own decisions. For some, life wasn't all that easy with managing an apartment, maintaining decent grades, and earning a living, but the experience was theirs in the end.

Soon the seniors will be out in the world, being their own person, perhaps meeting that special someone and raising a family of their own to watch grow, until they too become seniors with the same decisions to make. With only an estimate of four college years to complete, they will no longer be students, but adults out to fight the battles of the world.

CAMI SHOOTS FOR FAME

Talent shows! These two words are among the familiar vocabulary of one of Central's vocalist-pianists. Participating in every presentation available since elementary school, Miss Cami Bennett began to expand her distinct abilities. The gift of piano playing was established at the tender age of seven. When Cami began to sing along with the piano, she gained a new talent.

Shooting for a career as a performer is very important to Cami. "Besides the audience taking part in my performance, the most gratifying experience is relating the message of the lyrics," explained Cami. It is extremtly possible that the name Cami Bennett will be seen in the bright lights of Los Vegas!

FAMILY TRADITIONS ARE CARRIED ON!

Central High School is filled with many members of large families who often experience pressure for achievement. Frequently, one individual with this quality seems to stick out in the crowd. Leanne Wegenka is a senior who belongs to a ten-person family with a history of runners. She is constantly leaving sparks in her trail on the cross-country and track fields.

Leanne is the second youngest of her eight brothers and sisters. Four of these have participated in the same sport making high school history. One would assume the pressures would fall on the youngest to reach the same achievements, but this isn't the case in the Wegenka family. "I seem to put the stress on myself more than anyone else does," informed the track star.

Leanne started running because of her family's interest and soon fell in love with the sport. The team inspired her and she kept with it. It isn't all that fun either with practices varying from thirty to thirty-five miles a week. One could say Leanne's positive attitude kept her in a good perspective and helped her to acquire her goals. Coach John Chavez stated, "Leanne was an outstanding runner all four years; however, she was plagued with injuries which often slowed her down. She always bounced back though and became one of our best distance runners."

Leanne couldn't imagine her family any different. Although there's hardly any privacy in their house, frequent sprints along Ashland and Noyes help to calm her nerves.

In order to reach her goals, Leanne must set her pace wisely and take one step at a time. Who knows what may lie in store for this budding, young athlete.

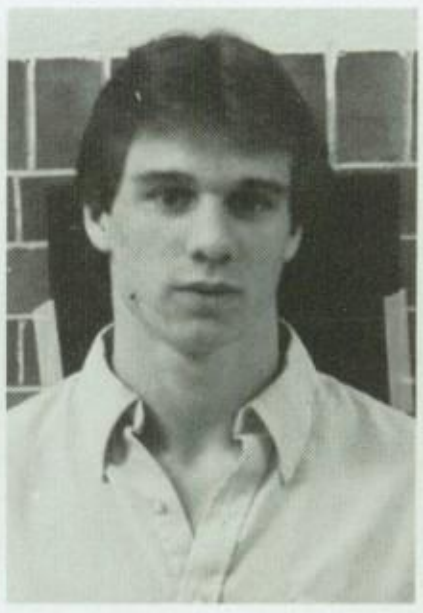
SENIOR AUTOGRAPHS



FOUR YEARS AGO, FRESHMEN

"I have found this group to be 'doers,' rather than 'talkers.' Leadership does not always come from expected places. These seniors have sensed needs and have provided both the work and the inspiration for accomplishments that will benefit Central long after these students are just pictures in a closed yearbook." This quote given by Mrs. Virginia Frazier gave a firm basis for this dedication to the Class of 1985.

It all started in the fall of 1981 as they stepped into the halls of Central, awed by the number of new faces. The freshman mixer, Hawaiian style, gave them the foundation to form friendships that would last the next four years. The elections of class officers Brett Halsey, Veronica Lopez, and Susi Brown gave the class solid leadership which would help them unify and grow. The fear of scrubbing Indian heads with toothbrushes always existed because upperclassmen constantly patrolled the freshman building looking for victims to pounce upon. Since they didn't want the freshmen to get used to Central, each week ended with the juniors hounding them to buy those irresistible pep buttons. The freshmen experienced rocketing pep assemblies that took place frequently on Fridays. "V-I-C-T-O-R-Y! That's the freshman battle cry" could be heard echoing throughout the main gym. The class of '85 was introduced to the moneymaker in 1981. Kirk Arthur, Rhonda Backes, Eric Eaton, and Cheryl Silkett led the inexperienced frosh through the wacky games. Even the mascot, the "foxy" Kelly Wolf could not overcome the senior superiority. As the year ended, the frosh looked forward to their next step up and relished the thought of having a chance at the the next year's freshmen.

Entering their second year, the sophomores were "pros" when it came to the locations of classes, so they exerted themselves in new ways. Jenny Mullican, Dan Dzubay, and Marilyn Thompson led the active sophomores as they began to join numerous clubs and dominated several of the athletic teams. Troy Elbert, Doug Heller, Sherri Roth, and Lisa Stuber drove their moneymaking enthusiasm into a third-place finish. Class mascots Cheech and Chong, Ted Corless and Scott Geoffroy, were attention-getters at the action-packed games. The class' involvement didn't stop there. Twenty-one determined sophs played varsity football, and talented Chris Kemp achieved a two-sport prize. Chris received All-City honors in football, and he was a State qualifier in wrestling. Since most of the students spent their time in the classrooms, they received a notice that their graduation credits had increased by one-half credit. It didn't sound like a lot, but for some people it was another burden to struggle through. The class of '85 ended their second year with the knowledge that they were about to become upperclassmen. At that time this special word had a certain ring to it. Not only did it mean just two more years left, but it also meant the use of spacious lockers.

It was a great feeling for the juniors to know that 800 people were looking up to them. With that challenge in mind, Chris Erdley, Doug Mead, and Terrie Hoecker unified the junior class, so they could excel in the many activities around the school. Rosie Schultz and Sherri Smith swung into the headlines by leading the girls golf team to a fourth-place finish in the state competition. Scott Rubinstein won the city medal in cross-country and qualified for the State meet. Moneymaker time came again with Doug Field, Jeff McFall, and Russ Purvis as the class mascots, the Three Stooges. The unstoppable team of Carla Barksdale, Bethany Berry, Monique Lucas, and Christian Ogi battled it out until the juniors were declared the overall winners. The Junior Spirit Force continually hunted down prospective buyers in order to earn money for the prom. Winter came, but the juniors were just getting warmed up. Chris Kemp repeated his advancement to the State wrestling matches, and the girls' basketball team, led by juniors Rhonda Backes, Monique Lucas, Rosie Schultz, and Jennifer Vollintine placed fourth at State. Jenny Mullican starred in "My Fair Lady" as the lovable Eliza. The prom was a night to remember with "Stairway to Heaven" as ts theme. Dana Bell reflected, "Stairway to Heaven" was great prom. I'll always remember how beautiful verything looked." Though it seems like most of the uniors' time was spent participating in activities, they were actually preparing themselves for the future. The PSAT and the ACT were college aptitude tests that helped test the students' knowledge. The junior year can be remembered for not only being the first year of upperclassmen power, but a time when students began making history.

After three years of struggling, their senior year finally began. This was the year they had all been waiting for. It was the year everyone longed for because escape was nearby. Before they knew it, the day would come when they would walk out of Central High School forever. Kem Williams remarked, "My senior year has been the most meaningful of my four years here, and it will be a year I'll always remember." Devin Scherubel, Marilyn Thompson, Rosie Schultz, and Mike Gentry were selected to lead the student body, and Dan Dzubay, Brett Halsey, and Julie Bishop were chosen as senior class officers. The senior athletes continued their excellence as Chris Kemp received All-State football honors. "No matter how much talent you have, you need great coaches to make you an athlete. I owe so much of this honor to the coaches of Central," expressed Chris. Scott Rubinstein qualified for the State cross-country competition again, and Leanne Wegenka was pointed out by Coach John Chavez for excellence in both track and cross-country. Scott also qualified for the State swim meet in seven different events. Eric Eaton maneuvered to seventh place in the State wrestling matches. Once again, the girls basketball team had an extremely successful year. In the academic area, the top 20 seniors were the go-getters and deserve a round of applause. Two Centralites, Marc Sommers and Marilyn Thompson, obtained national recognition for their extensive research and projects in the Westinghouse Science Contest. Marilyn went on to be named one of America's top 40 high school science students. Tamarra Brown was acknowledged for her artistic abilities in the ODYSSEY and the OUTLOOK, and Neal Tapp was pointed out for his fantastic speech and debate skills. Musicians and singers recognized were Cami Bennett, Don Karguth, Kenny Herkleman, Michelle Triplet, and Leah Weckerlin. Outstanding seniors in foreign languages were Dana Bell and Terri Hoecker in Latin. Marla Wilson, and Michelle Johnson in Spanish, Penny Stephan in French, and Jill Waldrop in German. For outstanding ROTC achievements, Rick Eckart, Sherry O'Neal, Becky Coffman, and Rick Johnson were recognized. Shelly Lamansky was acknowledged for her activities with Show Choir and capturing the lead in "Annie Get Your Gun." Jenny Mullican, Chris Kemp, and H.B. Taylor also had leading roles in the play. Other students recognized for their pleasant personalities and determination to learn were Richard Giseburt and John Klamert. The seniors were victorious in the moneymaker games thanks to Carla Barksdale, Doug Mead, Russ Purvis, and Melissa Willis. All of these students should get a standing ovation for the hard work they accomplished during the past four years.

This dedication has not given credit to every student in the class of 1985; many have not been mentioned; however, the accomplishments will not be forgotten. Reaching New Heights around Central was a difficult job, but this class had the determination and the dedication. Without a doubt these students will continue to make headlines in the future. These 354 students will become a great asset to the United States. They will no longer be scrubbing Indian heads with toothbrushes, cheering at pep assemblies, or competing in moneymaker games. They will be meeting new challenges, fighting hard battles, and conquering exciting goals. Most importantly, they will always be Reaching New Heights wherever they go.

NO SMOKING

Anxiously they entered Central High School as they had done many times before. This time, however, they felt bolder and a little taller as the realization that they were now "upperclassmen" sank in. Thoughts of being seniors and making important decisions seemed much nearer now. The juniors longed to be seniors, but they had clung to the high school life as if it would last forever. "I'm glad the years go fast, but deep in my heart I'm not anxious to leave Central," revealed Stephanie Smith.

If you were looking for the juniors during a pep assembly, they could be found on the north side, a full section of voices shouting, "86! 86!" Or you might find them here early Friday mornings, pumped full of energy and pep. Why? To try and persuade fellow students to buy their buttons and banners. Everywhere they scurried through the halls for vulnerable classmates.

Juniors almost completely occupied classes such as Language Arts III, Modern and Contemporary History, and Algebra II. Pat Hinchey informed, "All my classes were filled with only juniors and it was hard to circulate and meet the rest of the student body." By the time they were in their third year of high school, juniors were well known to the faculty, custodians, the principals and cooks. They became as familiar as the numerous stairways and blue or green halls.

The junior class was led by familiar names: Thad Evans, president; Kristen Ream, vice-president; and Trisha Harmsen, secretary/treasurer. The trio worked diligently to run the junior class. One of their major responsibilities was the junior-senior prom. Many hours of precious time were devoted to the planning and designing of this beautiful Central tradition.

No matter what the juniors were working on, their extreme dedication and enthusiasm could be felt by all. "The junior class is hard working, dedicated and excels in all directions," stated Scott Laderoute and Pat Colgan.

HARD WORK PAYS OFF

Silence engulfed the room. There were only two occupants in the dull cubicle. The judge and the contestant rarely glanced at each other as they awaited the moment of truth. It is now or never for the musician to show her talent. Only one mistake and it would all be over. How many times does an average person experience a situation like the above? Not many, but Junior Sara Crump did last year when she played the ten-keyed piccolo in State competition.

The vivacious junior started playing the instrument in the fifth grade and became extremely attached to it. Sara has constantly demonstrated her overwhelming talent on the shrill sounding piccolo in various bands, churches and many competitions. "I really enjoy playing in groups, but solos give me a feeling of self-achievement," exclaimed Sara. She works hard at reaching perfection by practicing daily and is determined to qualify for larger bands in the future. When asked what is needed to play an instrument, Sara replied, "Discipline! It's hard to stay in a band because everyone has separate personalities, and it takes courage to do something friends may find unusual."

'86 SHOWS STYLE!

Everyone was quietly holding his breath, and from out of nowhere came the unmistakeable SWISH. "Strike three," yelled the umpire, as the opponent swung the bat at Scott's famous curve ball missing the ball by inches. While impatiently easing their way to the edge of the bleachers and leaping to their feet all in one constant motion, the crowd suddenly roared, "All right, yeah, way to go, Scott!" These faithful admirers knew that the excellent pitcher, Scott Holcomb, had started Central's baseball team on their way to a winning season. When sixteen-year-old Scott looked up in the stands and saw his supportive followers cheering him on crazily, he commented, "I have to dismiss them from my mind. All my concentration must go to the game." Scott's father and grandfather have supplied him with an overwhelming amount of inspiration which enabled him to become as great as he is today. Holcomb's long term goal and dream is to someday play in the Major Leagues. Only time will reveal.

1. Restless for something to do, Scott Holcomb casually flips through the pages of a magazine.

Class of "87" is O'T
CLASS OF 87

During their second year, the sophomores eagerly set foot into the now comfortable halls of Central. They anticipated the day they would turn 16 and take the most important test of the year — the driver's exam! However, some unlucky sophomores were forced to wait until they became juniors before they could hit the streets.

Elections held at the end of last year showed Dana Mizell, president; Kate Reed, vice-president; and Sally Geha, secretary/treasurer. Dana's main goal was to unite the class and get more people involved in activities. "Our class was real ambitious this year; everyone tried to help!"

One sophomore girl commented that the guys had reached new heights by growing taller. While some people grew physically, others grew academically by taking harder courses such as Chemistry, generally dominated by upperclassmen.

Brett Jones explained, "I was really honored to be picked for Chemistry as a sophomore. I don't mind at all being with mostly upperclassmen; we all get along great!"

The sophomores may be geniuses but they're "Little Rascals" at heart. Sweeping the moneymaker games with a whopping first place, the "Little rascals" team of Wendy Conroy, Charlie Hausman, Camille Hendren and Brett Jones proved that their class was "o-Tay!" Camille enthusiastically expressed, "I think the games went so much better this year than last year! I had a lot of fun participating in them, too!"

This was only the beginning of the non-stop spirited sophomores, and involvement in sports proved to be no different. Tracy Jones and Kristen Wright showed their skills in victories this tennis season, along with Missy Hausman in golf, and David Wegenka in Cross-country, and many other sophomores.

Still looking ahead, the sophomores excitedly await their junior year. Doug Bailey remarked, "I just can't wait to be thought of as an upperclassman! It just seems like nothing can stop the class of '87!"

'NEW G' TOURS NEW YORK

What do Faith, Love, and Hope have in common besides being bus names? These are the most important words in New Generation. Melissa Norris, a sophomore, found that New Generation was all she expected when this group went on a "Victory through Faith" tour. Stops were made in Indiana, New Jersey, Canada, and New York. The Big Apple showed them the Empire State Building, and gave the organization the rare privilege of seeing "Cat's" on Broadway. "Some of our group didn't like New York, but I did!" expressed Melissa. This trip was far from all-play, no-work. "New G" sang at least once a day, if not more, in many churches and even a school. The group was constantly on the move, never staying more than two days in one area. Most of the churches provided homes for the students to stay, but when homes were not offered, the crew slept in hotels. Melissa was anxious to get back home mostly, as she explains, "I wanted to get a full night's sleep in my own bed!"

Walking down the long, long halls of Central, many confused freshmen asked the same questions. "Where's room 300B?" "This building has three floors?" "Which is the main building?" To help break the ice, the National Honor Society hosted the freshman mixer and christened it "The Love Boat." Jenni Stevens exclaimed, "I think it was a lot of fun and the freshmen really enjoyed it!"

Electing their class officers was an important moment for the frosh. Class officer sign-ups reached an all-time high. While the freshmen registered for school, they got the chance to sign up for an office. Sixty girls and guys signed up for secretary-treasurer; 57 sought after the office of vice-president. Trying for the top spot of president were 57 ambitious and confident freshmen. When the ballots were counted, the final tally showed Lemuel Moore, president; Stephanie Fuller, vice-president; and Jenni Stevens, secretary/treasurer. Reid Coffman, a vice-presidential candidate indicated, "When I didn't make it, I decided to run for senator. I think it is a great honor that I was chosen to represent my class."

As the year progressed, the freshmen participated in their first moneymaker, an experience they probably will never forget. Eddie Juda donned bow and arrow as "Little Big Indian", leading the frosh to third place in the games. When the leaves began to disappear from the trees and the temperatures dropped, winter sports began to replace the fall ones. But the freshmen's enthusiasm remained in full force. Finally when the last days of school were only moments away, 467 freshmen held their heads high as they walked down the halls. Only nine months before they had walked through the same hallways in awe, terrified, and with great anticipation. No longer would they feel inferior. The "Little-Big" freshmen have matured and become more prepared to Reach New Heights as sophomores. Stephanie Fuller rejoiced, "Central is extremely challenging and has a lot to offer. I'm proud to say I go to Central!"

AGENCY TO CENTRAL

What's it like coming from a small school to Central?

Sean Martin moved to St. Joseph from Agency just to go to Central. Sean felt that Central offered more academically than his Agency school. Both of Sean's parents went to Central and they thought that Sean needed this privilege also.

Coming to Central as a freshman held all the fears of getting lost and walking into the wrong classroom that everyone goes through. "I was confused by all the different buildings," expressed Sean. Moving to another city means that you must also make new friends but to Sean that came easily. "Everyone is friendly, but there are a lot of people," Sean commented.

Sean will continue attending Central all four years, fulfilling special interests in science.

What is it like to be a twin, to have an exact duplicate of yourself, who does practically everything you do? Well, two freshmen guys know. Geoff and Jay Selkirk, members of the Central tennis team, don't seem to mind the predicament of having a zerox copy of themselves nearby.

"Sometimes it is hard, but there is not a lot you can do about it," commented the bright-eyed Jay. "The only thing I disagree with," includes Geoff, "is that we are referred to as 'the Selkirks', not as Geoff or Jay."

Being identical and wearing closely related clothing might be discouraging to others, but Jay and Geoff love the attention! "We never trick people, they mix us up themselves!" added Jay. Besides enjoying extra attention because they are twins, Geoff and Jay experience something that few people do, the rare privilege of being a twin.

FRESHMAN AUTOGRAPHS

HELP IS ALL AROUND

Who did the students turn to when they needed help? If they needed to locate some information on Emily Dickinson or World War II, they probably headed straight for one of the libraries and into the capable hands of Mr. Gray Tietz or Mrs. Donna Wright. When the students needed medical attention Mrs. Ruth Swartz's office was their destination. She could supply them with all the necessities, such as bandages, ice packs, or a trusty leave permit in case of an emergency. Another asset to Central were the special education assistants. They provided their pupils with constant aid and attention. Without these special people and their tremendous knowledge, the students might have been left in oblivion. These talented individuals deserve the respect and praise of all the people associated with Central High School.

COOPERATION IS THE KEY

What's behind every good businessman? A great secretary. The same holds true for Central High. What's behind Central being the best school in the city? The office staff! Being responsible for the productivity of a school is a complicated task. The office staff must keep control in all situations and serve the school to the best of their abilities. Working right along with the staff were the indispensible office aides. Without the aides' special talent for running errands, the office staff might have been left behind schedule. Nori Baker offered, "By being an office aide you get to know the advisors and teachers a lot better. Mr. Tarpley has helped me tremendously. He's really taken care of me throughout my years here at Central." Through all the paperwork and phone calls the office staff trudged on, dedicated to making Central better than ever.

DAILY WORK IS NEVER DONE

Teachers and students are not the only people necessary for a school to survive. Two important groups that offered Central their time, talent, and energy were the custodians and cooks. From early morning to late evening the custodians worked hard to keep Central clean. The students would not feel nearly as proud of their school if it weren't for the pleasant atmosphere the custodians created for them. Mr. Clarence Perry discussed, "I've been with the school district since 1956. The kids and I have a good understanding with each other." The cooks offered the students a wide variety of choices to tempt their tastebuds. Without the daily meals that were provided the pupil's health would have been at stake. Mrs. Jessie Shaiffer expressed, "I really enjoy cooking for the students. I don't learn a lot of names, but I see a lot of happy faces."

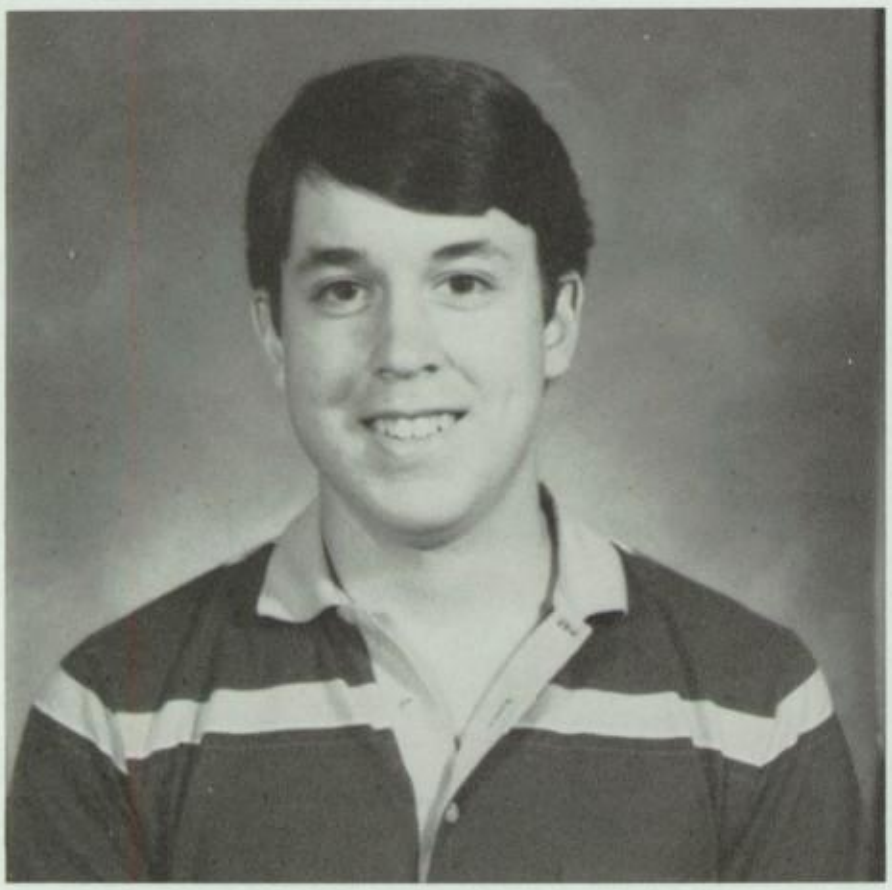
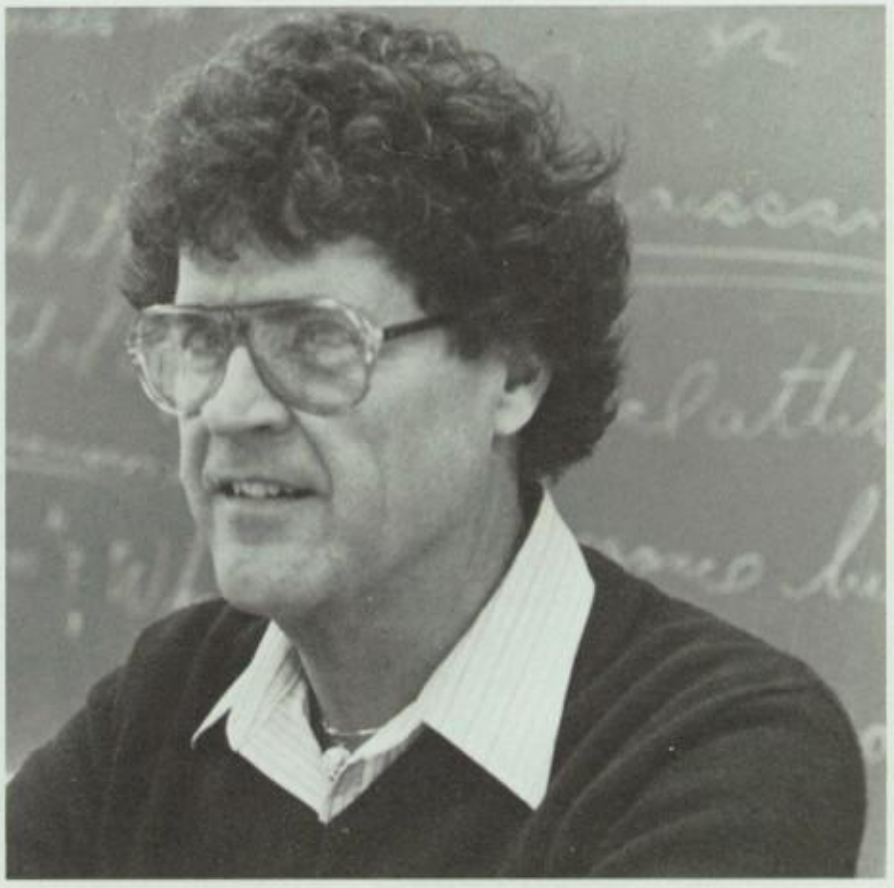
We Remember . . .



Jeff Francis
(January 5, 1985)



Louis Zeltner
(January 24, 1985)

Both of these fine men were our friends — loved, respected, and admired. Jeff, at 16, an honor student for the past three years. Mr. Zeltner a social studies teacher for the last eleven years.

Each of them possessed a strength and genuine quality in their lives which inspired those who knew them. Our lives are richer for having known them, if only for an hour.

"Nothing Gold Can Stay"

Nature's first green is gold,
Her hardest hue to hold.
Her early leaf's a flower;
But only so an hour.
Then leaf subsides to leaf.
So Eden sank to grief,
So dawn goes down to day.
Nothing gold can stay.

— Robert Frost

A GRADUATION TO REMEMBER

After a long twelve years of schooling, most students want to go out and celebrate their accomplishments following their commencement ceremonies. In years past, many seniors chose the partying route which involved many illegal acts. There is a change coming forth this year. Instead of taking chances with their lives, the three area high school senior classes are combining efforts to create a chemical-free party. Project Graduation is the name of this city-wide extravaganza. The Department of Public Safety created this idea for Missouri. Thad Evans, Tammy Follett, and Mr. Bill Hedge attended a conference in Jefferson City about Project Graduation. Presenting this idea to the senior class was a challenge for them. Fortunately, the idea was accepted. Many seniors signed up for committees to plan the evening's activities. Saving lives and making the best of the last few hours spent as a class is the purpose for this party. Mr. Hedge remarked, "Part of growing up is realizing that you can have fun without using chemicals to alter your emotions. Everyone should remember their last good-byes."

CHS STUDENTS WELCOME THE CLASS OF '89!

With looks of excitement, fear, confusion and anticipation, hundreds of young faces gazed ahead at the many activities Central High School had to offer them. This was the scene when area eighth graders traveled to CHS in February. Middle school had been a terrific challenge for them, but high school sounded like something they had never experienced before.

Academic choices were explained to them by the heads of various departments. Foreign language students demonstrated how French, German, Latin and Spanish can come in handy. These eighth graders were given the opportunity to laugh at English when Mrs. Virginia Frazier and her students provided a humorous presentation for them. Costuming and props were the key to success for the home economics display. Not only did the soon-to-be freshmen listen to speeches, but they also got an earful when Show Choir performed for them. These talented singers inspired members of the audiences to try out for the gleeful group when they became students at Central. Black clothed figures with painted white faces entertained the visitors with their silent world of mime. After the presentations, the drama students led the newcomers through the halls so they could familiarize themselves with the building that would one day become their second home.

AS SCHOOL DAYS END SUMMER FUN BEGINS

Inevitably, as May rolls around students' minds are torn away from their classes and guided toward their plans for the summer. They dream of lazy days in the sun with promises for adventure. As the end of the year draws closer, students find it all too easy to gaze out the windows as the teachers' lectures fade into the background. Visions of "fun in the sun" come into focus. Playing tennis, time at the lake, late sleeping hours, or even exotic vacations enter their minds. Kris Green remarked, "The most exciting thing to look forward to is laying out and getting a terrific tan." Other people felt differently about the purpose of the vacation time. David Wegenka expressed, "Sailing is the only reason for summer." Another eager student stated, "Baseball makes the summer fantastic." No matter what activities Central students will find to occupy their time, the extremely hot season will prove to be a special time of the year.

After saying your good-byes at the end of the school year, it's always fun to run into your friends during the summer. A quick catch-up on the latest gossip and a promise to "do something sometime" ends the meeting, and you're off once again on your own separate path. Summer is not all fun and games. Many students work at local businesses to earn some spending money. For the graduating seniors, summer is the time to make last-minute college choices or start looking for an apartment. One thing is for certain, when May 31 arrives, nothing will stand in the way of the students and their summer destinations.

Throughout our lives we will encounter
Troubles and hardships of every degree.
To overcome these problems we must remember
That striving for improvement is the key.

Fulfilling a goal is a glorious blessing
For all individuals with the courage to aim,
But making history is an overwhelming feat
And once it's accomplished, life is never the same.

In order to achieve, we must attempt the impossible,
Struggle for victory, and set our sights.
Triumph is inevitable for the truly determined
And for those who succeed in Reaching New Heights.
